GENTLEMEN:

I have long since heard of the famous qualities that have made the KIMBALL PIANO a favorite with so many of the profession, but never before have I had a practical realisation of the same. Since my arsival in your beautiful city one of these lovely instruments has been my constant companion, and I can consistently say that I find in the KIMBALL PIANO all that any one could hope to expect. The tone, touch and singing quality are all there in the heighth of perfection.

The popularity of the plano is not be wondered at, taking their many good qualities into consideration, and I am pleased to add my testimonial to the many that have preceded it.

Very Respectfully.

Avows His Purpose to Remove Frick-The Latter Will By relegraph to the Times.

PITTSPURGH, July 28.—[By the Associated Press.] A desperate and almost successful attempt was made this after noon to assassinate Henry Clay Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company (Limited.) His assailant was Alexander Berkman, a Russian Jew, came here from New York with the evident intention of killing Frick. It was a few minutes before 2 o'clock this afternoon when a young man en-tered the elevator in the Chronicle Telegraph building and asked to be let off at Frick's office. The young man off at Frick's office. The young man had been a frequent visitor during the past few days and the elevator boy thought nothing of the request. Two minutes later occupants of the building and passers-by on Fifth avenue were startled by three pistol shots, fired in rapid succession. The man had tried to assassinate the great steel master, but the latter, notwithstanding two bullet wounds and four ugly gashes from a dagger, is still alive and will probably recover.

THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION. Before the man came in Mr. Leish man, business partner of Frick, had entered the office and was holding a private inference. The office boy noticed a

He sprang to within five feet of Frick, and sprang to within five feet of Frick, and quickly drawing a revolver pulled the trigger. The first cartridge did not explode, but the second did, the bullet entering the back of Frick's neck. It glanced downward and passed out below the grmpit. Frick jumped to the window of the Fifth avenue side and tried to open it, but could not. Berkman rushed up to him and again fired, the ball entering the left side of the neck and passing around to a lodgment under the right ear. At this moment Mr. Leishman threw himself on the assassin and struggled to get the revolver. He clutched the barrel and turned the muzdents of the struggled to get the revolver. clutched the barrer and turned the mu-zle up as the man pulled the trigger again, the ball entering the ceiling. The desperate man then drew a dagger and attempted to stab Leishman. Frick saw the gleam of steel Leishman. Frick saw the gleam of steel and although staggered by the shock of his wounds and bleeding profusely jumped between the men and seized Berkman's arm. The latter freed himself from Leishman's grasp and plunged the dagger into Frick's right side, just above the hip, making an ugly wound three inches long. He made another lunge, and this time the knife struck higher up, but the point struck a rib and glanced without inflicting much injury. Twice again was the knife thrust at Frick, but he was merely scratched. merely scratched.

PRICK SAVES HIS ASSAILANT

By this time the office clerks and Deputy Sheriff May entered. May had a drawn revolver and was about to shoot Berkman in the back when Frick cried out: "Don't kill him! We'ye got him all right; leave him to the law." The man broke away and tried to escape, but was secured and taken to

to escape, but was secured and taken to the station.

In five minutes half a dozen surgeons were on hand and Frick's wounds were quickly attended to. He was caim, had perfect command of his faculties, and was apparently less excited than any other person in the room. From time to time he made suggestions, and half an hour after the shooting he dictated a message to Andrew Carnegie about the assault. At his request, all communication with his residence was shut off and his brother-in-law was sent to inform his wife and to reassure her. She had a child ten days ago and is still confined to her room, but though greatly distressed she bore herself bravely. After considerable difficulty the bullet ledged in als neck was removed and Frick was soon resting easier.

FRICK'S WONDERFUL NERVE. The news created intense excitement and telegrams poured in on Frick from people high and low from various parts of the country. At no time did he express fear as to his condition, and after the removal of the bullet he dic-received reports about the condition of affairs at Homestead.

To a salutation from Judge Reed, counsel for the company, exhorting him to keep his courage up, Frick smiled and said: "Oh, yes; I'll be all right, I guess."

The news of the attempt at assassination spread like wildfire, and in five minutes after the shooting Fifth avenue from Market to Wood streets was black with people and there was the greatest indignation at the cowardly deed. When Berkman was brought out of the building by police officers to be taken to the central station, cries were heard of "Shoot him now!" Some growled. "Let him have what he gave Frick," but the better element stepped forward and helped keep the assassin from mob violence.

Berkman had to be choked till black in the face before he would open his mouth and allow the dynamite cartridges to be taken out. market Anarchist, and commit suicide by exploding the cartridges in his mouth. It appears that the caps would not work and so the scheme failed.

After the dynamite cartridges were taken from his mouth, Berkman became more communicative. He told the Inspector that he is 26 years of age and has been working as a compositor on a New York paper. He declined to give the name of the paper. He said he came to Pittsburgh the day before yesterday. Berkman is still in the central station tonight and all attempts to interview him are unavailing. A charge of felonious assault has been preferred against him, and the police authorities say that bail will be refused. Several people who have seen him say he was present at an Anarchist meeting recently addressed by Herr Most in this city. Undoubtedly he has been in the city some time, having called at the Carnegie office Thursday and Friday. This morning he called and sent in a card, reading: "A. Berkman, Agent New York Employment Company." Frick was busy at the time and in a few minutes Berkman left. He was seen lounging about the street door for some time and evidently intended making the attempt as Frick was entering or leaving the building.

THE WOULD-BE ASSASSIN.

Known in New York as a Most Desperate Anarchist. NEW YORK, July 23 .- [By the Associated Press. | If the man locked up in Pittsburgh for an attempt to murder H. C. Frick is Alexander Berkman, for-merly of this city, he is an Anarchist of the most radical style. About six years ago Berkman, who is a Russian Jew, came to this city from Wilna, Russia. He made himself conspicuous by his marked radical views against capitalists, and it is said he attempted to organize a group for the express purpose of going about the country to exterminate capitalists. In 1891 he secured a a position in the composing room of the Freihett. Most's paper, where he worked a short time. He has been idle about the Anarchist haunts of the city for

The police are of the opinion that Berkman was simply the agent of Anarchists here and was sent to Pittsburgh for the express purpose of killing Frick. Detectives are working on the matter at this end.

A TALK WITH BERKMAN.

He Wanted to Kill Frick and is Ready to NEW YORK, July 24 .- [By ated Press.] A morning paper prints an interview alleged to have been had in Pittsburgh with Berkman the wouldbe assassin of Frick. The reporter says the prisoner at first refused to say any thing, talking about the capitalistic press, etc., but when the reporter addressed him in German he warmed un was dead and expressed disappointment when told that Frick's wounds were when told that Frick's wounds were probably not mortal.

When asked why he shot Frick, Berkman went on with a lengthy harangue in which he said no one had ever been benefited by Frick's living; on the contrary, he made thousands miserable in Homestead. People would soon be suffering the pangs of hunger on his account; thousands of men were idle because they cannot return to work without sacrificing self-respect. Six workingmen were buried last week. All this was chargeable to Frick.

"Such a man is a dog and should die. I wanted to kill him," said Berkman, "and I'm ready to die for it."

He added that he came to Pittsburgh merely for the purpose of killing Frick. He had been thinking it over for some time. He knew if he killed Frick escape was out of the question, but he decided he was only one, and his death would be nothing at all compared with the happiness of thousands of workers who would bless his memory. The probably not mortal.

When asked why he wanted to kill Frick rather than other rich men, Berkman said that a beginning had to be made so—where and Frick was more prominent as an oppressor of the poor than any other capitalist in the country. Berkman declined to talk about his identity or to say whether he intended exploding the dynamite cartridges he had in his mouth after the fashion of Lingg. He said he had no immediate intention of killing himself.

THOSE PUTRID PRIMARIES

One of the Second Ward Judges Unbosoms Himself.

Eighty-seven Anti-Lindley Ballots Removed from the Box.

Full Details of How the Outrageous Fraud Was Worked.

The Box Especially Constructed for the Oceasion-A Big Quarret Over the Division of the Spotls-The

The half has not yet been told about the rottenness and corruption which characterized the recent Republican primarles in this city, so far as th Second and Eighth Wards are concerned. There were undoubtedly frauds com-mitted in every ward in the city, though they were not so flagrant as in the two wards named, the top notch being reached in the Second, where Lindleyism, the synonym for repeating and ballot-box stuffing, reached its height. There were new and startling disclosures yesterday, and they are of such beyond contradiction. It that when thieves fall out honest men have some sort of a show, men have some sort of a show, or words to that effect, and in this case it now looks that way. It can now be stated as a positive fact that eighty-seven Hazard ballots were removed from the Second Ward box during the day; that even with this fraud at least five of the Lindley delegates were not ejected, and that enough tickets were added during the count to put them in. The authority for this statement is the man, or rather one of the men, who perman, or rather one of the men, who perpetrated the fraud, William Soulé, one of the judges of the election in the Second Ward. It appears that there was a dispute or quarrel over the division of the spoils and Soulé was left out. This, of course, made Soulé mad, and on Friday night he proceeded to drown his sorday night he proceeded to drown his sor-row in drink, in the meantime unloading his grievances as he went along. According to Soule's story, he himself made the box used at the Second Ward polling place at Tom Keefe's carpenter. shop, on New High street. This box was constructed with a special view to "crooked work," and another one of "crooked work;" and another one of the same kind was, made for use in the Eighth Ward. Soulé and Billy Davis were in charge of the box during the voting, Davis in front, Soulé in the rear, and Steadman on the side, and during the day Soulé abstracted eighty-seven Hazard ballots, he being able to distinguish them by the size and color. When the count was taken it was found that not enough ballots had been taken out, and Soulé made up the deficiency from a wad of Lindley tickets, with which he had considerately provided himself, and which he had concealed beneath his yest. Even with all that he could do. Soulé insists that Niles was not even the same kind was made for use in the yest. Even with all that he counted in Soule insists that Niles was not even just counted in Soule insists that Niles was not even then elected, but was just counted in any way. On Friday night Soule was "dead broke," and correspondingly desperate, saying that it was bad enough to be "cheated out of his money without being insulted by Niles," who, he said, had repudiated him. Yesterday morning Soule went to Secretary Paymorning Soule was supplied to the said said, had repuddated him. Yesterday morning Soulé went to Secretary Parfer, of the Republican County Central Committee, with his grevances, but received little consolation from that official, who disclaimed all knowledge of any negotiations of any sort or kind. It was charged that $350 was given Niles for use in the Second Ward, and that the particular had that that hat that astute politician had soaked" the same forthwith. Billy "soaked" the same forthwith. Billy Davis, another one of the judges, also had a grievance, but he did not talk so much or so loud as Soulé. It was pretty sultry all day, however, in the Second, and last evening Al Lindley herded the disgruntled "heelers" into a Gurney cab and took them to a room on North Main street for a conference with a view to arriving at some understanding by which further unpleasant talk can be stopped.

further unpleasant talk can be stopped. There is also trouble between managers" in the Eighth Ward, and if something is not done at once, it is more than probable that the inside facts will yet come out. There was almost an outbreak Thursday night when big Webber, a non-resident, was railroaded webber, a not-resident, was tarroaded in as a delegate, and two of the bosses would have come together but for the fact, as one of them stated, it would have "exposed Eighth Ward methods."

When it is considered that the whole have been changed but for these frauds, the full significance of the outrages per-petrated can be better appreciated.

"READING FOR THE TOUNG."

Miss Hasse gave her paper on "Reading for the Young," at 11 a.m. yesterday before a company of twenty-five ladies in the chapel. She considered the library as an intellectual restaurant where the child could satisfy its mental appetite. She placed the responsibility appetite. She placed the responsibility of catering to the mental taste of the juvenile reader one the parents. No other part of his training, however, is left by the average parent so much to chance. If a child displays a taste for wild adventure, for accounts of ship-wrecks, or of the strange people who inhabit the heart of Africa, or the allurements and dangers of lion-hunting in India's jungles—why deny him this pleasure? Only do not give him this nutriment in the form of "Tiger Dick," "Julius the Street-boy ont West" and other decoctions produced for the derangement of the juvenile mind. He will as readily assimilate the accounts of Paul du Challlu, the stories of travel by Edward Everett Hale, Butterworth's "Zigzag Journeys," Knox's "Boy Travellers," Stephens' "Knockabout Clib," and the account of Darwin's voyage in ellers," Stephens' "Knockabout Club," and the account of Darwin's voyage in the Beagle. These are full of adventure and will please the childish heart and at the same time by truthful description, whet the curious childish mind. Though the parents may surround the child with all the necessities, comforts and even refinements of life, and yet allow him to associate in books with characters that would shock them, if seen as real boys and girls, they are paying the way for that socialistic condition when the State shall assume the educational as State shall assume the educational as well as the industrial interests of our people.

As an instance of the difference in style in boys' books Miss Hasse read random selections from Henty's 'Capt. Bayley's Heir," a story of California in the days of '49, and from a dime novel. No comments were required on the difference in style, diction or moral.

"FUN ON THE PARM." A long line of equipages was drawn up before the pavilion vesterday afterup before the pavilion yesterday after-noon varying in style from the shining-surrey to the canvas-covered, chair-seated wagon of the rancher, who had brought his family in to hear what the Denver orator had to say about "Fun on the Farm." The trains from Los Angeles brought in a crowd of city peo-nle, too many of whom spent their ple, too, many of whom spent their childhood and youth on the old farm, and wanted to hear something about it. with an audience which tested its seat ing capacity. Dr. McIntyre first told a funny story about the way he was once introduced to an audience, and followed this up with another and another witty ane-dote which kept the audience in a gale of laughter. He remarked that if he should ask, at the close of his lecture the man who had witnessed the scene and passed through the incidents he had described to rise it would undoubtedly call forth such a response as did the cross-eyed teacher's request—"Let the boy I'm looking at come forward" and forther came. He evaluated that his fourteen came. He explained that his lecture was not designed as a solid logi-cal sequence but rather, like a glass of soda water—effervescing, sparkling, cooling. He advocated more clean fun in sermons and on the lecture platform "Life may be heavy, but it's worth a guinea a day to any man or woman to be able to see the bright side of it." he said and no man ever made a truer statement. He explained that there were three men who would have a miserable time of it during his lecture—the man who wanted solid, mental abulum the man who had no his lecture—the man who wanted solid, mental pabulum, the man who had no imagination, and the man who couldn't appreciate a joke, illustrating the sort of individual to whom he referred by spicy anecdotes as he went along.

His lecture proper was a series of word pictures, humorous, and sometimes pathetic, of life on the farm in the old West, and drew many a laugh and sometimes a tear of appreciation from the audience.

THE Homestead strike came along just in time to enable the Democratic party to load in a fresh supply of calamity shricking material.

A TIMELY and interesting sketch of Chairman H. C. Frick, whose assassination was attempted in his office at Pittsburgh yesterday, will be found in our telegraphic columns.

THERE is only one employer of labor in this country, as far as known, who has compelled free workmen to work by the side of Tennessee convicts in the mines at Briceville, and that man is Millionaire Brice, ex-chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

THE Pasadena Star makes a sensible comment on the action of the late Republican County Convention in reference to the ballot-box-stuffling exposé: "It takes a good party to face a scandal as manfully as the Republican did yesterday. The job was not a pleasant one, but it was done, and the enemy have small comfort from the result."

THE total value of the exports of domestic breadstuffs from the United States during the year ending June 30, 1892, was $288,925,000, as compared with $123,156,520 for the year ending June 30, 1891—an increase of $165,768,480. That is a good and satisfactory illustration of the manner in which the tariff and reciprocity legislation of the Republican Congress is killing the foreign trade of the Na-

THE question has been asked in regard to the nationality of the strikers at Homestead. No official statistics are available. Burgess McLuckie of the town of Homestead estimates that 45 per cent. are American citizens. At the last election there 838 votes were cast, from which the St. Louis Globe-Democrat infers that less than a third of them are naturalized Americans. The men on whom the officers of the National Guard have kept the closest watch are Hungarians.

CORPORATION COUNSEL JENKS has given an opinion to the assessors of New York city to the effect that homesteads pur chased with pension money cannot be taxed. The Tribune states that he says in his opinion regarding the case brought to his attention:

brought to his attention:

"I am of the opinion that if the pension money received from the United States Government by the petitioner is shown by legal evidence to your satisfaction to be invested in this homestead, such homestead is exempt from taxation to the extent it represents the proceeds of such pension. If purchased entirely by pension money, I think that it is wholly exempt; if purchased partially by pension money, it is exempt to the extent that it represents the pension.

THE Sacramento Record-Union, calling for the nomination by the Republican State Convention of foremost men for Presidential electors, suggests rge C. Perkins for the head of the ticket, "fortified by choice from among men of distinction in the party and prominence in State political history, uch as Morris M. Jewett, Obed Harvey and other real, substantial leaders of the Republican party and representatives of the thought, intelligence and manhood of the State.'

THE Santa Barbara Press, in enumer ating the candidates before the Santa Cruz convention, includes Alexander McLean of that county (formerly of Pasadena,) and a good man. It gives the names of the Santa Barbara delegates as: J. W. Taggart, Walter Elliott, A. M. Boyd, Nat Stewart, C. A. Stuart, A. H. Den, Grant Jackson and J. M. Short, of whom it savs:

The Enterprising Assassin. Assassination, the logical sequence of riot and anarchy, has been resorted to it the seat of the strike disturbances in Pennsylvania. The murderous attempt on the life of H. C. Frick, made in his office in Pittsburgh yesterday, shows the trend of things among the more extreme of the labor agitators-the Anarchists pure and simple. It does not appear that the would-be assassin was a locked-out employe of the Homestead mills, and the fact is significant as well as creditable to the Carnegie workmen as 2 body, who already have enough to answer for in the way of lawless violence. The shooter was just a plain assassin of the communistic or Anarchistic type, who thought he had a "mission" to perform in attempting to 'remove' Mr. Frick.

The chairman showed himself to the man of nerve that he is, and, though shot through the body, managed to grapple with his desperate assallant and fell him to the floor with the powerful blow of a six-footer who has dealt with violent men before, and knows how to handle strikers. nerve and self-possession he showed in a dangerous emergency was admirable and his rare consideration in sparing the wretched assassin's life, when he was about to be shot down by one of the manager's employes, proves Mr. Frick to be a man and a "thorough bred."

The episode-fortunately not fatalwill not help the cause of labor.

When the assassin, who was folled in his cheerful attempt to blow his head off with dynamite, goes the way of his kind, it may cause some of his fellows to pause and consider the subject of hemp and its uses under the law of free government, which travels with leaden heel, it is true, but finally "gets there."

England and Protection

It is a popular defusion that England stands as a monument of the benefi-cence of free trade. What are the facts regarding her earlier history in that re gard? The English government went so far, when building up that nation's industries, as to prohibit exports that would increase competition with her manufacturers. Anderson says, in 8 Edw. IV., 1497, that "sheep were exported from England to Spain, and the breed being thereby improved, pro-duced the fine Spanish wool, which proved detrimental to our manufacturers." Twenty-five later, as per Haydn's Dictionary of Dates, "Their exportation was prohibited on pain of fine and imprison ment, 1522." England took greater precautions to protect her manufacto ies until their industries were finally established and the English home ma kets fully developed than any other nation has ever taken. She is still protecting her farmers as greatly as possible by discriminating against live cattle, hogs and sheep, and other products of the United States and other countries. It is the part of wisdom for every country, as of every human family, to care for its own. In the language of scripture, "He who looks not out for his kids is worse por a Digger Injun."

OFFICIAL statistics show that at the time when the "tariff reform" adminstration of Grover Cleveland was in strikes were more numerous than they had ever been before. In 1885-1886 there were 12,145 strikes in the United States. From 1881 to 1884, during Republican administration, there had been but 10,159 etrikes. From 1881 to 1885, under Republican rule, 481, 009 persons went out on strikes. In the first two years of the Cleveland ad-In New York from 1885 to 1887 there were 5180 strikes. During the years preceding there were only 4067. At the end of one year of Democratic rule of the National Government there were 153,071 persons in New York out of work on account of strikes. At the end of the first year of the present Republican administration (1889-1890 there were only 93.801. The number of strikes in all protected industries duing the first year of "McKinlevism" was less by 200 per cent. than during the first year of the Cleveland adminis tration. HENRY CLAY FRICK.

Sketch of the Wounded Pennsylvania Iron-Worker. Henry Clay Frick, the chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company (limited.) and the member of the firm most prominently identified with the present trouble at Home-stead, is a man of indomitable courage and will power. He is a native of Pennsylvania, born at West Overton, Westmoreland county, December 19, 1849. His father, a man of means, gave him a good education and a chance to know the world, so that at 20 years of age he was fairly well equipped for life. He began it with small, display as clerk in a dry goods store at Mt. Pleasant, and in 1869 improved his business knowland in 1809 improved his business knowl-edge as book-keeper at his grandfather's flour mill and distillery at Broadford. While there he discovered the possibilities of the coke business, and with a fullness and clearness which confirmed his faith in it.

With such capital as he could command, he bought an interest in a coal tract near Broadford, and with some other young men built fifty coke ovens. Encouraged by his experience with these, the number of them was doubled. Then more coal land was bought, and the number of ovens again doubled. In 1873 the panic came. That was the source as well as the ruin of fortunes. It was the tide that overwhelmed the weak, but carried the strong to renewed wealth Mr. Frick's partners, embarrassed by indorsements, had to sell their interests, which he induced certain friends to buy. As the shancial distress increased, others in the coke business were compelled to sell, and Mr. Frick was at, hand to buy, and ovens which he could not buy he leased. Meantime his enterprise was called to sell, and Mr. Frick was at, hand to buy, and ovens which he could not buy he leased. Meantime his enterprise was called rashness, and there were predictions that the tide would overwhelm him next, but he kept heart and struck out the more vigorously. In answer to the predictions, when the revival of business occurred, he pointed to the annual profits of the leased ovens as greater than the value of the ovens themselves.

greater than the value of the ovens themselves.

He carried on the business in his own name until 1878, when he sold a share in it to E. M. Ferguson of New York, when it was known as H. C. Frick & Co. In 1882 the Carnegies bought a large share in it, and the name was changed to the H. C. Frick Coke Company. It was then the largest coke company in the world, controlling 12,000 acres of coal land, and more than 4000 ovens, giving employment to more than 5000 hands. While enlarging the output, every means was made to make it the best in the world. To obtain pure water works were erected costing pure water works were erected costing ing the output, every means was made to make it the best in the world. To obtain pure water works were erected costing $250,000. As a result the coke was demanded for a steadily-increasing variety of uses, and its reputation it mily fixed.

It is said that no other man ever saw "so far into the future of the great Connells-ville industry as he did," and certain it is no man ever ventured upon it with more confidence, pursued it with more energy or reaped from it a greater reward.

A few years later he bought an interest in the firm of Carnegie, Phipps & Company, and when W. L. Abbott retired, three months ago, he succeeded him as chairman. On July 1 of this year all the Carnegie interests were consolidated, with a capital stock of $25,000,000, and Mr. Frick was given absolute control of the gigantic concern. His wealth is variously estimated at

ern. His wealth is variously from $5,000,000 to $8,000,00 from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000.

Ten years ago he was married to Miss Ada Childs, daughter of the late Asa P. Childs, a prominent citizen of Phitsburgh, and for many years at the head of the Penn cotton mills. Mr. Friek's union was blessed with three children. He resides at the corner of Penn and Homewood zonnes in the corner of Penn and ner of Penn and Homewood avenues, in one of the handsomest residences of the East End. He is a member of the Duquesne and Pittsburgh clubs, and takes but little rec-reation. It has been stated that since the Homestead strike detectives have guarded his home, and that two officers were conner of Penn and Homewood avenues, i his home, and that two officers were con stantly near him, but this he has positively

The Homestead plant comprises 600 acres, with 37 acres under roof, including the armor plate mill, beam mill, plate mill, Bessemer department, 28-23- and 10-inch mills and 16 open hearth furnaces of from 20 to 40 tons capacity. When in operation throughout the entire plant the most perfect system prevails.

The yards are grid-ironed with railroad tracks to facilitate the transportation of raw or finished material, or materials in process of completion. Mineteen locomotives of all sizes are required to handle the traffic. The plant has at most convenient point shops for repairing, and turning rolls in which there are ten lathes; machine shops in which are employed thirty machinests and their helpers. The blacksmith shop, with forges, steam hammers, etc., keeeps twenty-five men busy. Repairs to gas and steam and water pipes and required connections demand the constant employment of a dozen men. There are carpenconnections demand the constant employment of a dozen men. There are carpenters, tinners, pattern-makers and mechanics of every branch employed. As has been frequently stated, 3800 men are employed to operate the works and several hundred thousand dollars are paid out monthly to the wage-workers. The profits of the coren are not known, as it is a private corporation, and a statement can not be obtained. The plant is valued at $8,000,000. poration, and a statement can not be obtained. A charming lady who knows more beautiful and attractive women than perhaps any other lady in the city, in conversation recently said: "I often feel sorry when I see so many beautiful women so delicate and suffering so much, and I have often asked myself why the reason is. I think ladies do not exercise proper care; they don't eat nourishing food. In devotion to home and family work, too hard and eat nourishing food. In devotion to home and family work, too hard and long without rest, recreation, too little sunshine. They are careless, of their feet, their necks, their chests. In these and other ways they open the door for disease and the thousands of troubles which so often affect womankind. But worse than all they allow their life strength and vitality to ran down to a low ebb. Their lives seem almost drained away; they are sick; they lose all the charms of womanhood and lead a life of misery and unhappiness: How many women we see constantly in this condition. They need help, they need something to depend upon; something that will assist them; some friend in need; such as is found in the Golden West Medical Institute, where proper advice is given; where low charges are com blind with the most skillful treatment; where they are in the care of old experienced physicians whose lives have been devoted to the cure of ailments of women, and who understand the workings of nature to plant seeds of health in their delicate organisms that will soon give them back their splendid constitutions, their strength, their eves that shine, their cheeks that w. their full red lips, their beautiful complexions, their plump forms and grace of carriage."

Another Forecast of the Coming Glad. stone Government-Irish Members Will Oppose Him if Home Rule is Deterred.

By Telegraph to The Times.

Berlin, July 23.—[Copyright, 1892, by the New York Associated Press.] The advance of cholera toward the Russian frontier absorbs the attention of the public to the exclusion of all other topics. The health of Berlin is fairly good, the only disturbing sign being some cases of cholerina, which are com mon at this time of the year. Most rigid precautions are being taken by the government. Advices from various Russian points afford little hope that the epidemic will be stayed. The announcements from St. Petersburg regarding the enforcement of sanitary regulations in the stricken districts do not correspond with the facts as seen by German physicians, who report a dire lack of sanitation, miserable quarantine service and bad arrangement of hospitals.

Vienna, July 28.—According to reports in Austro-Polish papers a workman died of plague at Baku July 2. The doctors declared it a case of plague. The Governor denied it and forbademention of the matter in the newspapers. No preventive measures were ordered by the authorities. The plague apread and a large number of inhabitants have since died. The disease came from Meshed. Three years ago the hospital authorities at Jarasslaff on the Volga River had pipes secretly constructed to convey the hospital sewage into the river just above where the town oblains its valer analysis and into the river just above where the town obtains its water supply, and the inhabitants of the town have been drinking poisoned water ever since. If a similar state of affairs exists at other time of the pollution may be a to the results as the re

St. Pefersburg, July 23.—Cholera is increasing at Saratoff. The death rate at Samara is higher with fewer cases. At Astrakhan there was a decrease in mortality. On July 19 there were 198 new cases and 57 deaths, against 195 cases and 132 deaths on July 18. On July 19 there were 57 new cases and 43 deaths at Samara against 75 new cases and 36 deaths on July 18. At Saratoff there were 119 new cases and 3 deaths July 18. were 84 new cases and 31 deaths. At Tsaritzin July 1,8 there were 89 new cases and 31 deaths, and at Azoff 46 new cases and 22 deaths.

Advices from Saratoff are to the effect that the town is garrisoned with troops for the purpose of suppressing disorders due to the intense excitement in connection with the cholera epi-demic. The epidemic continues to grow worse there. Disorders of a sim-ilar nature occurred in the northern cholera-infected places, owing to the lower classes not understanding the sanitary regulations, etc. In two sanitary regulations, etc. In two places hospitals were destroyed by mobs.

Several passengers on a steamer having died of cholera, the captain refused to allow any one to land. The passengers revolted. The captain got word ashore and a launch filled with armed soldiers was sent out. The troops fired upon the mutineers and compelled the vessel to proceed.

Sydney Buxton and Richard Knight Causton are sure of places, the latter probably being madea Baronet.

O'Connor does not believe Arnold Morley will be elevated to the peerage, but will probably take a higher place and eventually become speaker. Referring to the Conservative Association movement in favor of the postponing of the home fule bill gaining strength among the Radicals, O'Connor says that he assumes that the assertion is founded on the articles in some Liberal organs, and adds 'I cannot answer Liberals and Liberal journalists, but I can interpret the views of Irishmen, and the answer is that it will not do. By Telegraph to the Times.

New York, July 23.—[By the Associated Press.] Many Democrats of prominence assembled at the New York Central depot today to see Hon. A. E. Stevenson and party off on their return trip to Illinois. Among those accompanying Mr. Stevenson was H. Onderwood of Colorado, whose mission to the East has been to confer with ex-President Cleveland, Mr. Stevenson and other prominent Democrats on the advisability of Colorado Democrats indorsing the People's party can-didate for Presidential electors in that State. To an Associated Press representative, Onderwood said that it is a question on which the Democrats of Colorado differ. The failure of the Re-publicans to adopt a satisfactory financial plank created a revolt among them and the People's party received an impetus which places it in a position to control the balance of power, if not sweep the State. If the Democrats in-dorse the People's party candidate for electors the defeat of the Republicans in Colorado is assured.

Gleveland, Stevenson, Whitney, Harrity and others all favored indorsing, but Onderwood said they hoped to impose upon the People's party the condition that if the Democrats indorsed their electors, it is to be with the understanding that if the election of President were thrown into the House the Colorado electors must cast their Vice-Presidential vote for Stevenson. Onderwood thinks with this concession the Colorado Democrats will, without doubt, indorse the People's party candidates. in Colorado is assured.

ALBANY (N.Y...) July 28.—The train bearing Stevenson and party reached here on time and the Vice-Presidential candidate received a hearty welcome from several hundred people.

He was called out of the car and made a brief speech, saying he was carrying good tidings back to Illinois about the Democracy of New York and thanked them for their cordial reception.

After the speech the crowd gave three cheers for Stevenson and three cheers for Cleveland, and as many as could shook hands with the former before the train pulled out.

WORLD'S FAIR WORK.

Proposal to Form State Associations is California.

A correspondent of THE TIMES, T. W. L.," suggests, as a means of increasing the benefits to be derived by Southern California from the World's Fair, the formation of State associations here in California. He recites the following benefits which he believes the State would derive from such organizations:

First—By a careful and candid presentation of facts relative to the resources and advantages offered here through such an organization, the people of Ohio, for instance, would be able to form a more intelligent conception of the State than they now have,
it is a fact that the reputation which Caliadvantages onered here through such an organization, the people of Ohio, for instance, would be able to form a more intelligent conception of the State than they now have. It is a fact that the reputation which California has in the East is largely from representations made by railroad corporations or real estate dealers, and therefore is taken with a grain of salt. Our reputation must hencefor the come from the people. Second—This organization would impress the people of the East that we are here to stay and have no intention of returning to our native hearth, and hence we prove our profession by our life.

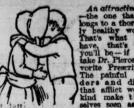

Third—Each organization could better make a comparative statement of the soil, products, values, olimate, etc., than could be made in any general way. Thus general statements of our ranches and their productions would strike the farmers of the great plains of the Dakotas, or of the protection would strike the farmers of the great plains of the Dakotas, or of the prairies of Illines, or of the forests of Ohio, or of the rocky hills of Massachusetts with varying degines of importance and only natives of each could convey a correct impression.

Fourth—Hy the special efforts of the organization and as incitividuals during the vear, in writing to friends or public journals we could greatly quicken the interest of the people which the World's Pair exhibit would intensify.

Fifth—At the California headquarters in Chicago can association could have its corner and its representatives to visit the various State headquarters and pilot the way through the California cannot have its corner and the correspondent, as a "Buckeye," suggests that Ohio should take the lead

We presume editors of newspapers have more inquiries for some remedy for the expulsion of ants than almost anything else. The New York Observerhas a correspondent who solves the problem as follows:

"Having had years of tormenz with ants, we lighted upon the following remedy, which, with us, works like magic: One spoonful tartar emetic, one spoonful of sugar, mixed into a thin syrup. As it evaporates or is carried off, add ingredients needed. A sicker lot of pests would be hard to find. Whether they impart the results to the home firm or whether all are killed, I know not. Certain it is they do not pay us a second visit. ONE WAY TO BUILD A HOME.

The by-laws of the Mutual Building and Loan Association of Pasadena have just been drawn up by the committee appointed for that purpose. This is a new organization composed of representative citizens and some general facts pertaining to it may prove of interest to the public.

The object of the association, as stated in the by-laws, is "to encourage industry, frugality, home building and savings among the stockholders, the accumulation of savings, the loaning to the stockholders of the funds so accumulated with the profits and earnings and the repayment to each stockholder of his savings and profits, when they shall have accumulated to a certain sum, or at any time when he shall desire ontrariogs and the repayment to each stockholder of his sayings and profits, when they shall have accumulated to a certain sum, or at any time when he shall desire the same. The capital is fixed at $2,000.000 of the par value of $100, payable in monthly installments and shall be issued in series. Shareholders must pay 50 cents every month on each share hed until the value of the stock in the series be sufficient to divide for each share of stock issued in such series the aum of $100. The other expense are nominal. Annual meetings will be held on the first Monday in July. At any meeting of the shareholders each shareholder shall have a right to vote the number of shares standing in his or her name. The officers ap resident, secretary, treasure and attorney. Stated meetings of the directors will be held each month. The remainder of the by-laws deal with the dutes of the respective officers and storney. Stated meetings of the directors will be held each month. The remainder of the by-laws deal with the dutes of the respective officers and state the manner in which advances or loans will be made. All loans will be well secured and will bear 6 per cent interest net.

The above merely hints at the plans and possibilities of the organization, which is evidently here to stay. A number of shares of stock have already been subscribed. The officers as elected at the last regular meeting are: President, T. P. Lukens; vice president, F. H. Vailette; secretary, W. R. Staats; treasurer A. L. Hamilton.

Another Fire Friday Night—Trouble

Another fire Friday night. A small house in the rear of Frank Hunt's place on Anapamu street caught fire at an early hour in the evening and burned to the ground. The house was unoccupied and it ground. The house was unoccupied and it was being papered and fixed up. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp. The alarm was sounded about $8.30 o'clock. A large crowd soon congregated and men went to work with buckets trying to save adjoining buildings, and it was by their efforts the buildings, were saved. The fire department yot no stream on the fire unit. adjoining buildings, and it was by their efforts the buildings were-saved. The fire-department got no stream on the fire until too late to do any good. They attached to the well at the St. Vincent school on Dela Vina street, but so far away from the fire that but a weak stream could be thrown. The distance from the well to the fire is nearly three blocks, or 1500 feet, too far to be effective. It is always easier to find fault than to furnish a remedy, yet there seems to be something radically wrong either in the fire department or the water, or somewhere else, and it should be remedied. As it is, when a fire occurs the department seems utterly unable to afford that protection to which the people expect and are entitled. The adjoining buildings were saved because there was no wind and were saved because there was no wind and

The parade Friday at the encampment was very good. Department Commander Fuller and Staff Commander Miller and the officers of the Southern encampment were in the parade and a goodly turnout of the old vets, who marched with as much energy and enthusiasm if not with quite so much energy as in the days of 1861. They were escorted by Co. D. Capt. Black, of the National Guards, who made a fine appearance. It is one of the most successful encampments the old boys say they ever attended. VENTURA COUNTY.

The First Week of the Grand Army Encampment.

Five Days of Merry-making and Pleasur for the Old Veterans-The Parade Yesterday-The Number of Visitors Increasing.

G.A.R. encampment in Ventura and people both in camp and out of it have fairly awoke to the fact that it is in every way awoke to the tack that it is in every way successful. Moreover the people have come to look upon the encampment as a kind of big, good-natured planic and every one is making the most of it. It is a rollleking crowd of old veterans and there is no let up to the merry-making, they appreciating that a few more years will see an end to all such gatherings. There is music in the morning and there is music at all hours of the day, and if not from the fife and drum corps it comes from one of the brass bands which came in from the surrounding country to liven things up. It is thus that the martial strains of some band or other fairly floats in the air. One of the most amusing incidents which has yet occurred, and one which will show how the camp enjoys itself, occurred immediately after parade Thursday evening. The orders which were read, called for the arrest of Capt. Rice of Riverside, senior vice-commander, for boasting that he knew all about a ship, when in fact he was observed to speak of "going down in the cellar" and other similar-remarks while on a trip to Santa Barbara the day before. The guard was called out to make the arrest and no sooner was the word given than Camp Cushing was in an uproar and for two hours pandemonium, seemed turn loose. A search was made in every quarter for the captain, and everybody joined in the chase. The laughter and merry-making was equal to any crowd of youngsters. Finally Rice was found up in a tree, but all efforts to dislodge him proved fruitless until the cannon was wheeled into position right under him and he was given a shot. He came down then and surrendered. Friday morning the court was convened and after one of the joillest half hour trials he was convicted and ordered dremmed out of camp. The W.R.C. came to his rescue at this juncture and took him away from the guard and he secured his liberty.

There are many other incidents, many of them highly riddeulous and some calculated to bring up the more solemn side of the picture that crop up here and there. Friday was taken for the most part by singing and speech-making at intervals, no set programme having been arranged. Among those whos note was Mather Targagem. to the merry-making, they appreciating that

Attempts to Create Dissension in Republican Ranks.

Charges of Fraud by a Wild-Eyed Democratic Editor.

Why the Belegates Were Appointed by the Central Committee.

The Whole Matter Was Regular in Every Particular and there Was Not a "Scheme" Behind it-General

BANTA ANA.

The Democratic liar is abroad in Orange ounty and has taken up his temporary resdence in a Democratic attic with the eccen tric and wild-eyed editor of the Standard. In yesterday's issue of the Standard the editor delivers himself of three-quarters of a column of exaggeration, assumption, misrepresentation and Democratic lies in regard to the recent Republican county convention which is designed to stir up dissension and strife in the rank and file of the sion and strife in the rank and file of the sention which is designed to sur up dissension and strife in, the, rank and file of the Republican party of Orange county. It is the old, old trick of the Democrats to cry "Wolf! wolf! wolf!" when there is no wolf in sight and none in the neighborhood. But by the! persistency in sounding an alarming note they hope to gain favor with the undecided and weak-kneed vater.

The basis of the Standard's effusion on "Republican Harmony," is taken from the action of the Republican County Central Committee in appointing delegates to the county convention, to select delegates to the Congressional and State conventions to be held in Merced and Sacramento, respectively, July 23 and 28. The editor of the Standard knows the facts that led to the appointment of the delegates by the committee, instead of their election by primaries, as is the usual custom, but he wilfully and maliciously suppresses this incommittee, who wilfully and maliciously suppresses this in-formation and tells his readers that "the formation and tells his readers that "the convention was a put up job to enable two or three candidates to fix up things to sult, especially in the Senatorial nomination; that S. Armor, as a candidate for Senator; J. W. Ballard, as a candidate for District Attorney, and Tom Hull, as a candidate for Sheriff, held a convention and fixed up a slate for delegates to their conventions and aver the people no notice whatevers that slate for delegates to their conventions and gave the people no notice whatever; that the whole affair was a Union League movement from beginning to end and they propose to rule or ruin, and will resort to any means, fair or foul, to accomplish their ends."

All of the above statements are wholly knows it better than does the Standard ed itor. He knows that in the call issued by the State Central Committee for the selec-tion of delegates to the county convention there is embodied the following resoluion: Resolved, that the delegates from the sev-Resolved, that the delegates from the several counties shall be chosen in such a manner as shall be determined by the Republican County Committee of each county, and the committee recommends that primary elections be held wherever it may be deemed advisable.

the committee was not cared together un-til it was too late to legally hold primaries, and therefore was not deemed advisable, but that under the call of the State Central Committee they had a perfect right to ap-point the delegates; he knows that the dele-gates appointed were so appointed without the Central Committee's knowledge of their personal preferences for candidates for personal preferences for candidates for State. Senatorial, Congressional or county honors; he knows there was no slate in the nonors; he knows there was no state in the convention—not even an attempt to make one, and that it was not a Union League movement any more than it was a National Republican League movement or a —movement of any political club, whose object is to further the interests of party measures.

ment of any political club, whose object is to further the interests of party measures to the exclusion of the personal interests of scheming politicians. His sole and only object in attacking the methods of the County Central Committee is to cause a disruption in the Republican party in Orange county, and thereby advance the interests of the Democratic party. He well, knows the Democratis of the county are tin a hopeless minority, and their only salvation is to succeed in creating dissension in the rank and file of their formidable opponent.

There was no put up game in the county convention and no bosses attempted to deprive the rank and file of the Republican party of their usual privileges. The delegates to the convention were appointed instead of elected, for the reasons given above, and not for the purpose of muzzling the voters of the party and advancing the interests of a few individuals, as our Democratic editor falsely and knowingly asserts. The Republicans of the county central Committee has exercised a power not rightly its own. The County Central Committee is composed.

THE UTAR ROAD AGAIN.

Thomas Taylor of Cedar City, Utah, has written a letter to the Mayor and Common Council of Los Angeles, also the Chamber of Commerce, urging the city to take steps toward encouraging the construction of a railroad from Barstow or a connection with the Atlantic and Pacific to Milford. He promises that such a road would enable coal to be sold in Los Angeles at 86 per ton, and bring iron to the Coast at a rate which would be profitable. He relates that none of the companies heretofore named as consequently the secondary of a road templating the construction of a road through this as yet unoccupied territory show any inclination of carrying out the enterprise. The Utah, Nevada and California and the Union Pacific have neither the money nor credit necessary to build the road, the Rio Grande Western to build the road, the Rio Grande Western people have given up the idea, and the new Salt Lake and Los Angeles scheme is yet in embryo. He owns coal and iron lands and is willing to cooperate with Southern California in building a line which would be of mutual benefit. If he meets with any encouragement he will come to Los Angeles and set the enterprise going.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

A Modern Tendency to Belittle the Office.

Fifty Years Ago Able Men Contested for the Prize.

A Change in the Method of Electing Vice-Presidents.

Aaron Burr and the Tragedy Which Fol-lowed His Defeat-Men Who Have ught the Office-How Arthur Was Nominated

[Contributed to THE TIMES.]
The Hon. Benjamin Silliman, who now at the age of 85 is living in ideal retirement after a most active career said recently to the writer that the ten-dency of the politicians to belittle the office of Vice-President was something of comparatively recent growth. "I myself have seen this development with amazement, for I remember well when the excitement and interest created over the nomination for the Vice-Presidency was only second to that which a canvass for the Presidential nomination caused. Moreover, I remember one oc casion when three men could have taken the Vice-Presidency had they but reached out their hand for it, and if any one of them had done so he would have become President and the current of our political history might have been changed."

The recent political conventions illustrate this tendency of which the venerable retired politician spoke. In neither of these great party gatherings was there any discussion except incidental and comparatively trivial of the Vice-Presidential nomination until after the candidate for President had been chosen. Mr. Seward used to say that an amendment to the Constitution caused this comparatively trivial intercaused this comparatively trivial interest in the Vice-Presidential nomination. and in that opinion he is confirmed by Mr. Blaine and by other students of our political history.

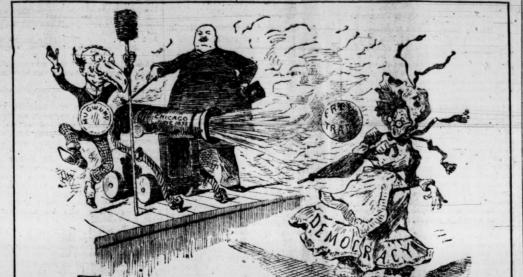

Prior to 1840 the ablest men were not only willing to accept the nomina-tion for Vice-President, but permitted their friends to make earnest canvasses in their behalf. And this was undoubtedly due to the fact that until the sec ond election of Jefferson the Vice-President was looked upon as in the line of succession, and the lingering influence of such sentiment did not die out entirely until after the promotion of Martin Van Buren from the Vice-Presidency to the Presidency.

It was originally the law that the person who received the largest number of votes in the electoral college should be declared elected President, while he who received the next largest number ond election of Jefferson the Vice-Presi who received the next largest number should be declared elected Vice-President. This gave opportunity for political maneuvering, and it was predicted by Jefferson that it would cause trouble sooner or later. When the electoral votes were counted in 1801 it was found that Jefferson and Argen Park found that Jefferson and Aaron Burn were tied, and the contingency for which the Constitution had made provision was at hand upon the occasion of the third Presidential election. There being no choice in the electoral college the election was taken to the House of Representatives, and there Jefferson was chosen through the influence of Alexander Hamilton, who preferred the Democrat Jefferson to the Federalist Burr, although Burr was of his own party. The dramatic and awful sequel of this election was Hamilton's death medium of the property of the selection was Hamilton's death medium with Paure (This election than the property of the paure of the property of t a duel with Burr. This election showed grave perils in the method first adopted by the Constitution, so that a constitutional amendment was passed and adopted by the States providing for the election of President and Vice-President after the manner which now prevails.

Notwithstanding this change in the Constitution the ablest men in the country looked with desire upon the vice-Presidential nomination. George Clinton sought it because he and his friends believed that it would put him in the for the Presidency, and so doubtless it would had not the party to which he belonged the Federalists, become dispunsed. Fibridge Communications of the presidence to which he belonged, the Federalists, become disrupted. Elbridge Gerry, one of the most able men of his time, felt highly honored when chosen Vice-President, nor was his political influence in the slightest degree diminished by reason of his holding of that office. Daniel D. Tompkins and his friends regarded his selection as Vice-President as a great personal triumph for him and to New York State and Laby C. Call. as a great personal triumph for him and for New York State, and John C. Cal-houn most willingly accepted the office, believing that his political influence would be increased thereby, and that his ambition to become President would be more easily realized by virtue of his holding this office than through any other political instrumentality. Martin Van Buren accepted the Vice-Presidency for no other reason than to maintain his political influence and to make it apparent that President Jack-son regarded him as his political lega-tee. Van Buren's career in officeholding was the only one of steady pro-gression. He served first in the New gression. He served first in the New York Legislature, then was Controller of the State, an office which has fur-nished more Senators, Governors and Cabinet members than any other minor office in the United States; then Van Buren became Governor, Senator, Sec-retary of State, Minister to England, Vice-President and President, a record of public officeholding unparalleled in

HOW ARTHUR WAS NOMINATED.
Early in June of 1880 the writer hap-pening to be in Albany met Gen. Ar-thur pacing up and down the platform of the railway station, evidently waiting for a train. Gen. Arthur said that he was on his way to Chicago. He was going to the National convention. "I think we shall be able to nominate Cart Crant!" said he.

asked.
"No," he said in reply, and speaking with a manner of indifference, "I have not heard any. Interest is all centered in the Presidential nomination. If we nominate Grant I think it is quite likely that Levi P. Morton may be nominated for Vice-President."

Gen. Arthur had no more idea that he was to return from Chicago Vice-Presidential candidate than he had that he would ever be President of the United States. His ambition was in a different direction. He expected to be elected United States Senator in the following

His fate came as so many other political fortunes and misfortunes do, without warning. After Garfield was nominated those in authority went to the New York delegates and said: "If you will name your man he will be nominated for Vice-President." There was some suggestion of Mr. Morton, but he shook his head when it was made to him. Then they turned to Arthur. He sought Senator Conkling, who was then

Two years later President Arthur said to the writer: "I was Vice-President long enough to realize that the popular-conception of that office is erroneous. It depends entired upon the man whether the office may be maintained with personal and party influence. Of course there are no official opportunities, but there ought to be no curtailments of personal or party opportunities, and a great man in that office would be likely to raise it above the subordinate conception which it now holds in the minds of politicians."

The intemperate expres-sion of this Auarchistic opinion is costing Pennsylvania a pretty sum of money and has given a shock to all the industries of the country which the tardy firmness of Pattison can only partially heal.

It is exceedingly unlikely that during the remainder of this century at least there will be any marked deviations from the general form and arrangement at present in use by the best newspapers on this continent. Changes there must be, in time, in all respects, methods and instruments, but the present state of mechanical perfecnature of the case continue to grow the present state of mechanical perfection which has been attained by the higher exponents of the newspaper art is such as to preclude any significant and startling changes in the near future. What those changes will be in the number, size, quantity of columns, quality of matter, and mechanical device, is a fruiful subject for speculation. I will touch upon it farther on. 'Those would require other changes also in the distribution, number and general arrange ment of the workers. In time, no doubt, a single great newspaper may be compelled to employ hundreds where it now finds work for scores of men and women. That there can be any great improvement in the morale of the mass of working journalists, in their addacity courage, intuitive "nose for news," instinctive loyality to the newspaper, not the man, and patient endurance of privations and lack of appreciation which would discourage almost any other class of working is hardly to be other class of workmen, is hardly to be expected. [Contributed to THE TIMES.] Whitelaw Reid, the Republican candi-date for Vice-President, is spending the summer at his country place about twenty-five miles from New York.

It is a magnificent estate of over 800 acres and is quite appropriately called Ophir Farm, for the wealth which has been spent upon the place would tax the resources of the wonderful ophir of old. Originally there were about twenty farms lying in this corner of picturesqu Weschester county, but several years ago Mr. Reid effected their purchase and combined them in a single large estate. He built a palatial home there, which was burned to the ground four years ago, and the present mansion is scarcely completed even yet, although the family occupied it the second weel

The house, which is built of gray granite, quarried on the place, is irregular in form and with its great square tower and castellated walls, looks like a tower and castellated walls, looks like a baronial hall in the midst of a great park. The site is superb, the house standing on a high ridge, from which the hills gradually fall away to Long Island Sound, which is plainly visible only four miles away. In the other direction is the historic village of White Plains, and for two miles in that direction one can drive by a private road to the property of the propert tion one can drive by a private road through Mr. Reid's own woods.

through Mr. Reid's own woods.

In the front of the house is a great lawn running for several hundred yards along the broad crest of the ridge, while at either side are various small gardens, each with its own name, as the rose garden, the shrubbery garden and Mrs. Reid's garden. The house is fanked at each side by broad esplanades or terraces inclosed by stone walls and with flights of stone steps leading from one to another. from one to another.

Approaching the house by the driveway, one pauses under the porte cochere, which is directly in front of the main entrance, and from which, if the front doors be open, one catches an enchanting vista down the great hall to the beautiful window at the end.

This hall is sixty feet long and forty feet wide. The floor is of parquetry and there is a pattern of inlaid bronze in the border. Immense Turkish rugs are on the floor, as they are in all the are on the floor, as they are in all the rooms, for the rugs were brought by Mrs. Reid herself from Constantinople. There are a great many other Orietal affairs which she picked up in those countries, among them a very large, solid brass standard for burning incense. This, however, as well as other brass vases of decidedly Oriental origin, is now filled with ferns and tall plants. The walls and ceilings of the hall are of Etowat marble from Georgia, and so is the grand staircase at the end. A frieze, however, which is about three feet wide and which runs around the entire apartment, is of Vearound the entire apartment, is of Venetian mosiac in a pattern of roses and Opening from the hall at the left of the entrance is the reception-room, Opening from the hall at the left of the entrance is the reception-room, twenty-two feet square, in which the walls and woodwork are entirely of San Domingo mahogany inlaid with mother of pearl. This room contains several beautiful French cabinets of the time of Louis XVI, and in this very feature is found the key-note of the entire decoration and furnishing.

The walls here, however, are of stamped illuminated leather. The house is lighted throughout by electricity, there being 250 lights in the dining room

Directly across the hall is the entrance to the drawing-room, which is sixty feet long. The walls of this room are of light wood with raised gold patterns and were brought directly from and old French chateau. There are two sets of furniture, one being upholstered in French tapestry and the other with a brocaded satin which had hung for 100 years on the walls of an old Italian palace. Here again are Lous XVI cabinets, mirrors and dainty tables and desks. Even the brass fender in front of the fireplace is old and French, with beautiful figures in quaint old styles. From the drawing-room one goes out at one corner into the library, which is a dark, massive-looking affair in solid black oak. The fireplace and mantle of Numidian marble, reaching from floor to ceiling and carved in great figures, is a magnificent piece of work and is considered one of the features of the house. The ceiling is paneled off by heavy beams of the oak and the spaces heavy beams of the oak and the spaces are filled by frescoes, commenced by Bunker and finished by. Maynard, after the former's death. Here again we find the prevailing French motif in the shape of two old-fashioned red chairs, having "hooded" tops.

From the library one enters Mr. Reid's own "den," as he calls it, a quiet room, with walls of dark red leather studded with brass nails and with a view of the terrace, the gardens, and beyond all the sound, with its white sails coming and going. There are but sails coming and going. There are but two doors into this sanctum sanctorum, the one from the library and the other opening upon a sort of inclosed porch, from which one can pass to the broad veranda, which runs way round the house to the other extreme wing, where the kitchens are.

woodwork. Every bedroom in the woodwork. Every bedroom in the house has its own individual bath, but Mr. Reid's bath and dressing room would accommodate ten ordinary people. Queen's navee. Queen's navee."

On the second floor is a room which is called "Mr. Mills's room." It has been fitted up for D. O. Mills, father of Mrs. Reid, and is never given to any one else. In this room the woodwork, like that of the dining-room, is of malegam, inlaid with seed and the walls hogany, inlaid with pearl, and the walls are hung with dark green satin brocaded in the same color. An exquisite French desk is in the front of the broad windows, but the dressing bureau looks quite "modern American" with its pincushion and tailst cushion and toilet set.

The entire house is fire-proof, as Mr. eid does not propose to have another Reid does not propose to have another experience like that of four years ago. The cost of the building itself approaches $1.000.000, while the furnishings would increase that amount indignities. We need have his parallel definitely. Mr. Reed has his own elec-tric plant on the place and has as com-plete and luxurious a home as if it were in the midst of a city. He is in direct telephone communication with New York, and for a few days subsequent to his nomination the wires were kept busy repeating to him the messages of congratulation which came pouring in.

Mr. Reid says that he will spend the summer at Ophir Farm and direct the opening of the campaign from there.

One cannot blame him for clinging to his life, is that helf paradies for should he gain the office for which he is nominated, he will not be lodged half so royally as he is at beautiful Ophir Farm.

They buy cold roast veal or beef or ham and console themselves with hopes of a time when they may be able to buy fresh meat and cook it themselves. Even in well-to-do families the dinner is the only warm meal of the day, tea, consisting always of bread cold meat consisting always of bread, cold mean or sausage, cheese, tea or beer, occa-sionally eggs or warm sausage. For the rich there are endless varieties of these cold dishes and entrees to be had at the grocers' and the different sorts of bread alone would make a meal.

> GRACE ISABEL COLBRON. Arrangement of Flowers.

The interest in flowers has immensely increased of late in this country. One has but to examine any one number of the magazines published monthly by some of the leading florists to realize how widespread it is. It is delightful A Princess's Friend.

Madame de Falbe is in more ways than one a remarkable woman; she is the Princess of Wales' only intimate.

Generally the indestructible tomato cans serve as flower pots in these soli-tary windows, and fully and freely the plants flourish therein, but I wonder why the flower-loving woman does not tear off the colored paper which makes the tins hideous, and leave them in their quiet, gray tone, which does not inter fere with the hues of the blossoms. One seldom sees this done; the cans are more likely to be covered with some piece of wall-paper border. Or if they are painted (the best way of preserving them.) a flery color is selected, and leaf and blossoming are subordinate to the vermilion cans. One longs to implore, "Paint your cans olive-green and let the flowers have a chance."

When the dooryards are beautified in the spring the same thing happens—the washtubs, or firkins, or pleasant, ancient iron pots used to hold the earth for the plants, are painted a screaming cobalt blue or a shouting scarlet. Some missionary ought to go through the land preaching a gospel of olive-green for these tubs and pots and pails. Sink the tub, dear neighbor, and lift the flowers. Who cares to see the washtub? There are few flowers that will keep heautiful more than two days. Drum-beautiful more than two days. Drum-mond's phlox is an exception. I have mond's phlox is an exception. ! known it to be fresh for a whole known it to be fresh for a whole week, and I have kept a Bon Silene and also a La France rose fully that time, growing more exquisite every moment till they shed their delicate shell-tinted petals over the snowy linen cloth of the little over the showy linch they stood. The golden coreopsis coronata will keep a week. Of course this means changing daily the water in which they are kept after the first twenty-four hours in all cases. Sweetpeas go off color in a day and night—the white ones keep a little longer; nasturtiums also, unless a bit of longer; nasturtiums also, unless a bit of the vine with buds on it is gathered, when they go on blossoming for days and will very likely throw down roots. Forget-me-nots are wonderful in this respect; they will last indefinitely, and respect; they will last indefinitely, and almost every stem will send its cluster of clean white roots down into the clear, untainted water. Mignonette becomes a horror after the first day. Poppies always keep for me two whole days, perfectly fresh till their petals loosen and fall. Pansies last two days and more but the charming things have more, but the charming things have a way of shrugging their shoulders and twisting and turning themselves about, and presenting their backs to the audience in spite of all you can do after a

Simplicity of form, uniformity of color, are safe guides for the selection of vases for use, the lower in tone the better for the effect of the blossoms. Clear white glass is always safe. When decorated vases are used it is When decorated vases are used it is to the decorated vases are used it is of the decoration, but this is dangerous of the decoration, but this is dangerous ground. It should be borne in mind that the vase is merely a receptacle in which to display the beauty of the flower, otherwise it is of mo consequence, unless it enhances that beauty. Fortunately the vase is not a question of meney. There are inexpensive vases and jars much better than the most elaborate creations in pottery. A Day & Martin blacking bottle isn't at all a bad thing for flowers; its plain, brown stone color is very good, and its shape not at all objectionable.

The presiding genius of Smith is its organizer, L. Clark Seelye, one of the ablest educators of America, as well as ablest educators of America, as well as the most urbane, cautious and progressive of men. Dr. Seelye is refreshingly simple and suggestive. The growth of Smith from fourteen to 650 students in sixteen years is no less, a marvel to its president than to the advocates to higher education.

Dr. Seelye is a brother of the president of Amherst College. He was born in Connecticut in 1887, educated at Union College, Andover Seminary and the

Dr. Seelye is thoroughly in sympathy with woman's advancement and keenly alive and appreciative of her opportunities, and while cautious of establishtunities, and while cautions of establishing a precedent he is ever ready to respond to healthy progression.

Personally Dr. Seelye is the typical New England clergyman, with kindly blue eyes and a well-defined, beardless mouth responsive to humor, and hair and whiskers of auburn hue. To a gentle voice is added courtly inviting manner.

"I have frequently been asked," said Dr. Seelye, "if higher education would not eventually engender in women a dislike, or repugnance to marriage One of my greatest difficulties has been to postpone marriage among our female faculty. No sooner do we get an ex-ceptionally clever woman professor and congratulate ourselves on the posses-sion when she marries and leaves us. I recollect once citing this fact to an in-quiring gentleman, and quoting, as a possible case where a woman might be-come so absorbed in her work as to be infallable in this respect, the career of Miss Alice Freeman, then Wellesley's brilliant president. Returning from Europe a couple of months after this declaration I met the same gentleman. "Have you heard the news?" he asked.

LIDA ROSE MCCABE. Safe Drinking-water and Milk.

The most important class of impuri-ties in water is the organic substance which it always contains, especially that which has flowed over land surface covered with vegetation, or that which has received the drainage from sewers. The soluble matter found in such The soluble matter found in such water is excellent food for many kinds of micro-organisms which form, often by their multiplication poisons very destructive to animal life, or the organ isms themselves may be the direct pro ducers of disease, as for instance the typhoid fever bacillus, the bacillus of diphtheria, and many others found in

These bacilli are destroyed by heat so that the most valuable effect produced in water by boiling it is their destruction. Such water is therefore a much safer drink to use than that which has not been boiled. It loses its usual flavor; we call it "flat," but this flavor can be restored by shaking the water in a caraffe or other vessel so that it can reacquire oxygen, nitrogen and car bonic acid.

Water should always be boiled if there is the slightest suspicion of dangerous impurities in the supply. This leads us to the though that the extensive use of tea and coffee in the world may be an instinctive safeguard against these forms of life, until recently un known.

The universal use of cooked water in some form in China is a matter of history. The country is densely populated; the sewage is carried off principally by the rivers. so that the danger of contracting diseases through water must be very great, and it is probable that institute of the contractions of the country that instinct or knowledge has prompted the Chinaman to use very little water for food, except that which has been cooked. Spores of organisms are not killed by this treatment, as they are very resist this treatment, as they are very resistant to heat, but they are not common, they do not develope into bacteria for some hours after the water has been boiled, and they may be entirely destroyed by allowing them to grow and then killing by a second sterilization. For all practical purposes and under ordinary circumstances water is rendered safe for use by boiling it once.

REVERIES AT SEA.

The Sensations One Feels When Far from Land.

The Friends We Learn to Love in the Cabin.

Louise Chandler Moulton Tells in Prose and Verse

ium of Lyrics—The Congenial Party on the Pabonia.

AT SEA ON THE PARONIA, June 18. 1892.-We have sailed along for a week of pleasant days since last we saw the shore, and it will be three days more before we land at Liverpool. I am fond of these Boston steamers which take me up, so to say, at my own door and are long enough in crossing the ocean to give me a "sea change."
I never set sail on the Pabonia without being reminded of James Russell Lowell, who was twice my fellow passenger on this staunch steamer. "I like to have room for my elbows," he used to say, "and one gets it here; and I like week of pleasant days since last we saw say, "and one gets it here; and I like to be at sea long enough to know where I am." I sympathize with this prefer-ence of Mr. Lowell's, and I find a charming vacation from the common place engrossments of the land in these long June days that I am at liberty to make as idle or as busy as I choose. There are pleasant people to talk with—lawyers who could give Julian Hawthorne and Inspector Byrnes plots for a hundred exciting and mysterious tales. a hundred exciting and mysterious tales a nuntred exciting and mysterious tales —clergymen who believe in the strictest creed of the Puritans, and others for whom the broadest humanity of the Unitarians is not too generous. Here is a pretty actress: here another little English Lord Fauntleroy, who calls his mother "dearest" and devotes himself

libra little knight to her saving. Here like a little knight to her service. Her is the typical Boston girl, wise and witty, and by no means disdainful of good gowns. Here is a Christian Scien ist, a very good angel of a woman, in whose touch surely there should be healing, and of course she is from Bos-ton. I wonder if there are any Chris-tian Scientists in London? In short, there is the usual variety of passengers one finds on a favorite and therefore a full steamer.

And then there are those other friends—the books one takes into one's cabin and lives with, in companion-ship as real as that of any of the people with whom one talks, and more inti-mate. I have read the new volumes of mate. I have read the new volumes of poems by Rudyard Kipling and William Ernest Henley; and I have read once more that unrhymed tragedy, "Tess of the d'Urbervilles." People have been talking busily about "Tess" for more than six months, and the tele is not yet an old story. I read it, of course, wher it first came out; but, like all tha Thomas Hardy has written, it is a bool one returns to again and ag.in, and always with fresh interest. "Does it not belong in the 'locked book-case?" asks a doubter at my elbow. No-unless the Bible belongs there, and Shakespeare, and the Idyl of Launcelot and Guenevere. It is the story of a human heart—a heart in its cosence pure and strong—and it is told by a master in fiction, poet, seer and philospher, all in one. Alone, almost among his contemporaries. Thomas Hardy has the courage to maintain that it is not the one returns to again and ag. in, and al ways with fresh interest. "Does it no courage to maintain that it is not the weak who should be punished but the strong; and that it is the tempter, and not his victim, who deserves our scorn. So much for the moral (which is never by any chance obtruded) of this matches. less tale—its pathos, its passion, its poetry, what words would suffice fitly to

There is no man who writes of pleas ant life with such insight, such power, such absolute comprehension, as does the author of "Tess." I heard him speak once of a book it was just then the fashion to praise and which dealt with a tragedy in humble life. "It's not the right thing." he said. "She looks down at her people, and pats them on the head. Her attitude is all wrong." Hardy does not pat his peasants on the head—he does not look down at them; but with level gaze straight into their eyes—straighter still into their hearts. The angel of straight into their eyes—straighter still into their hearts. The angel of justice could hardly know them better the angel of mercy could hardly deal with them more generously and gently. has seemed to me Hardy's mastepie but I think even that is surpassed but I think even that is surpassed by this story of "Tess," so splendid, so terrible, and yet so piteous. Few, indeed, are the writers of today does Rudyard Kipling—whether he write such matchless tales as "Without Benefit of Clergy,"

Man Who Would Be or "The Man Who Would Be King," or "The Incarnation of Krishna Mulvaney," or such alto-gether incomparable ballads as "East and West," or "Gunga Din," or "Fuzzy Wuzzy." Then, in this new volume— "Ballads, and Barrack-room Ballads" there is "Tomlinson," and I would give more for "Tomlinson" than for many a yolume of ethics. I wish Robert Brown ing could have had the sympathetic leasure of reading it. Robert Brown

ng, who himself wrote:
The sin I impute to each frustrate ghost is the unlit lamp, and the ungirt loin."
It was the National Observer (the paper William Ernest Henley that first had the courage to publish this strenuous protest against the do-nothing kind of morality. Tomlinson gave up the ghost in his house in Berkeley the ghost in his house in Berkeley Square, and a spirit gripped him by the hair and took him to that gate where

St. Peter holds the keys; but the good saint challenged his right to enter— "Stand up, stand up how, Tomlinson, and answer loud and high The good that ye did for the sake of men or ever ye came to die—
The good that ye did for the sake of men, in little earth so lone!"

But the naked soul of Tomlinson grew white as a rain-washed bone, and he answered that he had a friend on earth who was his priest and his guide, and who would speak for him if he were there. But St. Peter frowned, and told

For that ye strove in neighbor-love it For that ye strove in neighbor-love it shall be written fair.
But now ye walt at-Heaven's Gate and not in Berkeley Square:
Though we call your friend from his bed this night, he could not speak for you. For the race is run by one and one, and never by two and two."
Then Tomilison looked up and down, and little gain was there.
For the naked stars grinned overhead, and he saw that his soul was bare:
The wind that blows between the worlds, it cut him like a knife.
And Tomilnson took up his tale and spoke of his good in life.
"This I have read in a book," he said, "and that was told to me.

that was told to me. And this I have though that was told to me.

And this I have thought that another man thought of a Prince in Muscovy."
The good souls flocked like homing doves, and bade him clear the path,
And Peter twirled the jangling keys in weariness and wrath—
"Ye have read, ye have heard, ye have thought," he said, "and the tale is yet to run:

he worth of the body that once ye had, give answer, what ha' ye done!"

And still poor Tomlinson tried to clothe his naked soul. He had read, he had heard, he had thought! But Peter twirled his jangling keys wrathfully. Ye have read, ye have felt, ye have guessed, good lack! Ye have nampered heaven's gate.

There's little room between the stars in idleness to prate!
Oh, none may reach by hired speech of neighbor, priest and kin.

Through borrowed deed to God's good need that lies so fair within:
Get hence, get hence, to the lord of wrong, for doom has yet to run,
And the faith that ye, share will Berkeley Square uphold you, Tomlinson!

And then the spirit that was his guide once more gripped him by the hair and they fell, sun by sun, Till they came to the belt of naughty stars that rim the mouth of hell.

The wind that blows between the worlds nipped him to the bone, so that he yearned to the warmth of hell as if it were the fire on his own hearthstone. it were the fire on his own hearthstone. But Satan was scarcely more hospitable than St. Peter had been. He caught the hasting Tomlinson and demanded what claim he had to enter—what harm he had done to the sons of men before he came to die. And even here Tomlinson's account was not satisfactory. There was a woman—there is always a woman—and she was his neighbor's wife good sooth. woman—and she wife, good sooth.

"Oh, I had a love on earth," said he, "that kissed me to my fall, And if ye would call my love to me I know she would answer all."

But Satan sneered at him still: Though we whistled your love from her bed tonight, I trow she would not run For the sin ye do by two and two ye must pay for one by one."

And still the wind that blows betwee the worlds cut poor Tomlinson through and through and he tried to bethink him of more sins wherewith to com-mend himself to the Lord of the Evil Fires. He had laughed once power of love and twice at the the grave and he had patted the head that he might seem brave in the eyes of men. But still the devil saw no worth in him that should entitle him to be warmed by the good pit-coal of hell; and Tomlinson began again with his tale of what he had read and heard and thought. At last Satan sent forth his little imps to winnow out the shivering thief and see if he had really any soul at all. And

Over the coal they chased the soul and racked it all abroad,
As children rifle a caddis-case, or the raven's

As children rife a caddis-case, or the raven's foolish hoard—
And back they came with the tattered thing, as children after play,
And they said: "The soul that he got from God he has bartered clean away.
We have threshed a stock of print and book and winnowed a chattering wind,
And many a soul wherefrom he stole, but his we cannot find."

And the devil, being after all of com and the devil, being after all of com-passionate nature, was troubled for the shivering wretch, but alas! he had no room for him, and so he bade him make haste and get back to Berkeley Square; where the grim black stallious waited to hear his body arrange. to bear his body graveward, and get once more into the flesh, and be either sinner or saint:

"Go back to earth with a lip unsealed-go "Go back to earth with a lip unsealed—go back to earth with an open eye,
And carry my word to the sons of men, or ever ye come to die:
Thet the sin they do by two and two they must pay for, one by one—And . . the God that you took from a printed book be with you, Tomlinson!"

Between the ballads of Rudyard Kipling and the "Rhymes and Rythms" of W. E. Henley there are two things only in common—originality and strength. The work of neither of them could be mistaken for that of any other man. Henley is a master of epithet. His adjectives are like the brush-strokes of an impressionist artist. Who else in the world could make you behold this, which Mr. Whistler would call A 'Nocture's turne? Trees and the menace of night; Then the long, lonely, leaden me Backed by a desolate fell

Backed by a desolate fell As by a spectral battlement; and then, Low-brooding, interpenetrating all, A vast, gray, listless, inexpressive sky, A vast, gray, listless, inexpressive sky,
So beggared, so incredibly bereft
Of starlight and the song of racing worlds
It might have belied down upon the void
Where, as in terror. Light was beginning to be. The very phrase "inexpressive sky" makes you see it all. Under this lifeless dome "A great white moth fades imperceptibly past." and that line, too, is a picture such as no other than Henley could have painted. One of the most noticeable things in

One of the most noticeable things in Mr. Henley's work is the successful audacity of his experiments in metre. His lines, now short now long, and always bravely musical, haunt the ear by virtue of their very strangeness. They are strenuous, picturesque, and above all, they are individual—Henley and no one else, past or present. But and no one else, past or present. But our poet proves by many of the numbers in this volume that he has no need of eccentricity with which to emphasize himself; for when he writes in measures himself; for when he writes in measures familiar to other poets he is still lord of his own doman. How full of weird sugestion is, for instance, this brief lyric

One with the ruined sunset,
The strange forsaken sands,
What is it waits and wanders,
And signs with desperate hands? What is if calls in the twilight— Calls as its chance were vain? The cry of a gull sent seaward, Or the voice of an ancient pain? The red ghost of the sunset,

These dreary and desoiate reach But I that it walked alone! And who has ever told more briefly and more vividly the story of the two who, having loved once, love no longer, but meet in the light of common day than it is told in these following stanzas

You played and sang a snatch of song,
A song that all too well'we know;
But whither had flown the ancient wrong
And was it really I and you?
I, since the end of life's to live, And pay'in pence the common debt,
What should it cost us to forgive
Whose daily task is to forget?

You babbled in the well-known voice— Not now, not now, the words you said. You touched me off that famous poise, The old effect of neck and head. Dear, was it really you and I?
In truth the riddle's ill to read;
So many are the deaths we die
Before we can be dead indeed.

But, after all, these lyrics are not so unmistakably and inimitably Henley as are the the rythms that are his only, with their affluence of picturesque sug gestion. Who but he would have writ-ten of the grave-worm—whose com-pany we all dread—as "the convict-worm, in that black bridewell working out his term?"

Who else has perceived "the shining,

Who else has perceived "the shining, sensitive silver of the sea"—the river wandering "jaded and forlorn" under "a stagnant sky?"

For him the "stalwart ships" are "beautiful, bold adventurers," and the lighthouse is "the tall policeman, flashing his bull's-eye." Who else has so fitly characterized man's triumphant, last enemy as does Henley, when he writes:

smile,
Death in his thread-bare working trim, Comes to your bedside, unannounced and bland, Death, with his well-worn lean professional

And with expert, inevitable hand Feels at your windpipe, fingers you in the Or flicks the clot well into the laboring Thus signifying unto old and young,

However hard of mouth or wild of whim, 'Tis time—'tis time by his ancient watch to part With books and women and talk and drink with books and would a and art:

and you go humbly after him
To a mean suburban lodging; on the way To what or where
Not death, who is very old and wise, can

This last passage is one of "The London Voluntaries," and I should be inclined to call these "Voluntaries!" the grandest numbers in the book, did not the volume contain and conclude with that chant of praise to England, which, it seems to me, can never be forgotten.

that chant of praise to England, which, it seems to me, can never be forgotten while still the bugles of England are blown round the world. Altogether, this new volume of Mr. Henley's has been an acquaintance it were worth many an ocean passage to make.

LONDON, June 25.—The Pabonia came to anchor last Tuesday morning at Liverpool; and all we—ten-days'-friends—shook hands and parted. Some went to Wales; some hurried through England to that paradise of the American—Paris; others have gone to Norway, to find the midnight sun. As for me, here I am, as others have gone to Norway, to find the midnight sun. As for me, here I am, as usual, in London. But London is scarcely London this year. Parliament dissolves on the 28th. Fashionable London will presently flee away. Literary London lingers a little longer, but the Author's Society dinner and the Literary Ladies' dinner, and other pleasant symposia are over. Sarah Bernhardt is charming crowded houses, and Lady Windermere still waves her fan in the pride of success. I wish I had reached here in time to see Isaac Henderson's play, Agatha. It was a splendid triumph over the doubts against which a new dramatist must always contend. Every one supposed it would be a pecuniary loss, as Mr. Henderson was his own manager, and would be a pecuniary loss, as Mr. Hen-derson was his own manager, and engaged for even the smallest parts the best and most costly talent; but he had his reward, even from a pecuniary point of view, and car-ried away profits galore, when he sailed for America on the 15th of June. Five matiness only were given, and the house matinees only were given, and the house was packed at each performance, and toward the last many more were turned away than could possibly be admitted. In short, "it was a glorious victory," and I grieve that I was not here to see. All England is talking now about the election. "Will Gladstone win?" is the election. "Will Gladstone win?" is the question on everybody's lips. For me, I wonder whether the Grand Old man (who says he was never better) has secretly discovered the elixir of lite—and will perchance be Premier a century of the control of th tury after all the rest of us are dust.

THE WORLD'S NEW METAL.

Aluminium Can Never Supersede Iron and Steel.

[Contributed to THE TIMES.] Aluminium is fast taking its place among the metals of everyday life. of the surest indications of this is that we find it quoted on the commercial price lists along with tin, lead, zinc, copper and iron. The true meaning and importance of such an incident is apt to be underestimated by the general public.

The present status of the aluminium industry is unique. All the aluminium now being made commercially is made by electrical processes. The chemical method, using sodium, is entirely superceded. Further, it appears as if, after five years of development, the elec-trical methods have almost reached their limit. The method of passing an electric current through a molten bath of fluoride salts in which aluminium oxide has been dissolved is in theory. one of the simplest processes conceivable, and is in practice rapidly approaching perfection. Having the right principle to work on, manufacturers trouble themselves very little about radically new processes and are putting all their attention to perfecting details of the present method. ing details of the present method. With cheaper aluminium oxide, cheap With cheaper aluminium oxide, cheap power and the decreasing cost of all minor items such as comes from working on a large scale, it is estimated, without exaggeration, that aluminium will be manufactured in the near future at about 25 cents a pound. It costs at present between 40 and 50 cents.

present between 40 and 50 cents.

We may almost surely expect aluminium to be selling again at 50 cents a pound inside of a year, but it is probable that somewhere about this figure will limit its price for several years to come. At this price aluminium is about on a par with copper, bulk for bulk. An aluminium and a copper rod of the same size would cost nearly the same. There are really at present only six metals selling cheaper by the pound metals selling cheaper by the pound than aluminium, viz., iron, lead, zinc. copper, tin and antimony, while if an ompare the cost of equal bulks, only con, lead and zinc are materially cheaper. The amount of aluminium being made The amount of aluminium being made daily in the world is not difficult to estimate. In the United States the Pittsburgh Reduction Company is making 450 peunds daily, and the Cowles Electric Smeiting Company at Lockport, N. Y., 400 pounds, making a total of about 150 tons a year. In England the Metal Reduction Company at Patricroft, Lancashire, produces 300 pounds daily, and the Cowles Syndicate Company at Stoke-on-Trent 250 pounds daily, making a yearly total of about 100 tons. In France, the birthplace of the aluminium industry, Minet Bros'. works at St. Michael, Savoy, produces daily 300 pounds, or 55 tons a year. The largest works in the world are in Switzerland, at the Falls of the Rhine, where 1500 horsepower is used to produce 1200 about 150 tons a year. In England the horsepower is used to produce 1200 pounds of aluminium a day, or 215 tons a year. We may, therefore, say that aluminium is now being made at the rate of about 2900 pounds a day, or $200 tens a year. 520 tons a year.

In spite of this large manufacture it is a fact that, at the present time, the demand for the metal far exceeds the supply. Consumers cannot obtain from the makers all that they are willing to buy. Let us inquire what is being done with so much aluminium and why more that they are all the statements.

is yet demanded.

The valuable properties of aluminium are, in the order of their importance, its great lightness, resistance to corro-sion, workability, strength and com-Parative cheapness.

Aluminium will and must win on merits. It will be aided in doing this by every fair, impartial presentation of its real properties; it will be hindered by every exaggeration and misrepresentation of those writers who ignorantly extol it to the skies. The end of property hundred years may see alumning the second of the skies. another hundred years may see alum-inium the most widely-used metal in the world next to iron and steel, but it is never destined to supersede them be cause it is not a fit metal to do so. The Homestead Trouble in Politics

The Homestead Trouble in Politics. [New York Commercial Advertiser.]
On the principle, that any stick is good to beat a strange dog, some persons want to drag the Carnegie-Homestead trouble into politics. The affair has nothing whatever to do with politics. It is pure work and wages, nothing else. Even the tariff is not an element in the quarrel. Ardent political partisanship may seek to associate the men's objections to being thrown out of employment at the new year with the theory of free trade. ST. PETLESBURG, July 8, 1892. - [Special Correspondence of The Times.]
The peasants have sown their crops and the prospect is that Russia will have a fine yield this year. The reports, which are received daily here from the famine districts, are very encouraging, and though the famine is still raging the backbone of the demon of Russian starvation will, it is believed, be broken by the 1st of September, when the harvest will have been gathered. Great want and much suffering, however, must continue to exist for the next year or so in many of the states, and a drought this summer may precipitate a second famine equally as terrible as the present one. Notwithstanding all that has been published concerning the famine, we in the United States have but little idea of its terrible extent and of the wonderful manner in which the Russians have handled it. No country in the world, with perhaps the exception of the United States, could withstand such a strain as Russia is now undergoing, and there is no nation in undergoing, and there is no nation in the world, except perhaps one, that would rise to the emergency and do so much for its people as Russia is doing. The contributions America has made have been of great good, and they are most thankfully, and, I might almost say, tearfully received, thut they are only a drop in the bucket to what Russia herself is doing. Our and other outside gifts amount, all told, to perhaps $750,000. The donations of the government and the people represent in the neighborhood of $350.000,000, and the Czar himself has given about $10,000,000. himself has given about $10,000,000 out of his private fund. The government loans to the famine villages amount to more than $100,000,000, amount to more than $110,000,000, and these loans no one ever expects that the peasants will repay. It is a physical impossibility for them to do so, and, as one of the chief officials of the government said to me latterly, the Czar does not expect repayment. He always gives a present to the people upon certain occasions, such as the coronation of a Grand Duke. such as the coronation of a Grand Duke and at the next such event one of his presents will probably be the forgiving of this debt. This $100,000,000 was given almost outright by the government, but in addition to it numerous schemes have been favored and author ized by the Czar to get money for the sufferers, and the bulk of the gifts have come from the people. One of these schemes was by a lottery under the Treasury Department, the prizes of which were guaranteed by the Imperial Bank, and the profits of which went to Bank, and the profits of which went to the famine. Russia has no lotteries as the famine. Russia has no lotteries as the rule, and such things are ordinarily against the law. This lottery brought in about $75,000,000, and all classes patronized it, many of the wealthy buying thousands of tickets. I know one man here who bought $10,000 worth of tickets, choosing scattering numbers, and he did not get a single prize He or tickets, choosing scattering numbers, and he did not get a single prize. He was twitted on his bad luck and replied: "I don't care, I have the satisfaction of knowing that my 20,000 roubles have gone to help the famine." St. Petersburg is a city of many rich people, and many of the nobles here took from $1000 to $5000 worth of these lotters.

PEOPLE WHO GAVE $175 000 000 Consul-General Crawford estimates that the gifts of private citizens in Russia to this famine have been not less than $50,000,000 roubles, or the enormous sum of $175,000,000. The gifts almost surpass comprehension, and all told, notwithstanding the vast population of Russia, they amount, including those of the government, to $3 for each man, woman and child in the whole Russian empire, or to $15 per family. When you remember that of the twenty odd million families that make up the Russian people not many more than 1,000,000 of them probably has ever had $15 at one tine in its possession, you get some idea of the mighty strain this has been on those who could give and have given. The nobility have in all cases led the list, and hundreds of well-educated girls and women of the best families of this and other Russian cities are now in the famine districts fighting with the demons of starvation, typhus fever and the smallpox in behalf of the peasants. A number of these ladies have caught the diseases of the peasants, and a Russian countess who wont from St. Petersburg was among those who took the smallpox. Almost all of the great landed proprietors in the famine districts are doing what they can to help their people. I hear of men who have been feeding and caring for five, ten and in some cases even twenty and twenty-five thousand peasants, and Count Bobrinsky, who is at the head of the transportation of famine relief here, is, in connection with his family, supporting nearly thirty thousand people out of his own means, and at the same time alding in the distribution of the foreign and government relief fund among the people outside of his estates. less than $50,000,000 roubles, or the mous sum of $175,000,000.

$1000 to $5000 worth of these lottery tickets, but the great majority were sold to people of small means, and the buying of them was, so to speak, the

A fund of $10,000,000 has been set aside to build elevators and places for the storage of grain in all the various districts, and through our Consul-General, Dr. John M. Crawford, the Interior Department has investigated our system of crop reports and has just now decided to adopt this system for Russia. Secretary Rusk forwarded full information and from now on the same organized system that we have constructed will be in force here. Heretofore Russia has had no agricultural statistics and the peasants have lived from hand to mouth. They are not economical or thrifty nor accumulative in our sense of the word and it requires a study of their character and their condition to understand the situation. Thirty years ago they were in the condition to a great extent of our slaves at the South and if today the negro and the planter had been left to work out their salvation at the close of the war without the aid of the money and push of the North they would probably be of somewhat the same character as these people are here today. fund of $10,000,000 has been set aside where you go. Their condition has been such that they have never come to understand the value of money, and this has been the case with both rich and poor. The rich have been so rich that they had all they could want. The poor have been so poor that there was no chance for them to get more than enough for mere existence, and so with no ambition but for the day both classes have been rushing madly along until they are now at the end of their rope and a turn will have to come very soon. Said a Russian bureau officer to me this afternoon: "The trouble with us is we never think of the morrow. If we have much today we spend it, and if we have little tomorrow we make the best of it. If I should give my droschky driver 100 roubles today it would all be gone tomorrow, and our people have not yet the least idea of accumulation and thrift. For this reason many of the best, business establishments of the country are managed by the Germans and the English, and most of the factorial country are managed by the Germans and the English, and most of the factories here are owned by foreigners."

HOW THE RUSSIANS LOOK. improssed with the strength of char acter seen in the faces of the people first saw these Russian peasants at Jerusalem about four years ago. It was at Easter time, and they had come by the thousands on a pilgrimage to the wholy sepulcher, and of the polygot humanity which was gathered there from the four quarters of the world there were none so strong in feature and in frame as these Slavs. I see here every day walking the streets of St. Petersburg with bundles on their backs, driving cabs or droschkies and working on the streets, men whose nobility and strength of features would create remark in any American crowd and extended to the streets. mark in any American crowd, and at to acknowledge them if you found them among your ancestral portraits. Their foreheads are high and broad, their eyes straight, honest and kindly. Their noses are large and clean cut, and their cheek bones often rather promi-Nearly all are bearded and many are long haired and part their hair in the middle. Their frames are as strong as their faces. They are a big-boned, well-jointed race, and they look as though they were made to stay. The women are of the same character as the men. They are not handsome nor pretty, but they look kind and motherly and what we would call fine looking. They lack taste in dress, have no ideas harmony of colors, and wearmean the peasants—handkerchiefs of all the brightest colors of the rainbow upon their heads. Their dresses are of red, blue or other gay colors, and they are gathered in at the neck and waist, and fall to the feet in ungraceful folds. They have no ideas of corsets and many of them wear long aprons tied over the bust, gathered in at the waist and falling almost to the feet over their gowns. They are sturdy of frame and rather dull and quiet in manner. They do as much work as the men and the men and women work in the fields side by side. The men of the lower classes, as I see them here, are more picturesque in their dress than the women. Russia is the land of the cap, the long

Russia is the land of the cap, the long coat and top boots, and the peasants wear coats of homespun, with long frocks, and even such as dress in sheepskins, with fur turned in have their coats reaching to below the knees. Here in St. Petersburg I see few without overcoats, but further south the peasant man's dress is of red calico, shirt and captaleous, the shirt coming outside. man's dress is of red calico, shift and pantaloons, the shift coming outside the pants and belted at the waist, and his feet are covered with a sort of coarsely woven straw shoe and his ankles are swaddled in rags. The better class of poor people or the ordinarily well-to-do men here wear long coats, with top boots, and the national can is with top boots, and the national cap is worn by nearly every one. This is to a large extent the costume of the rich, though the wealthy all over the civilized world dress much the same as we do. The difference here is largely in the quality of the goods worn, and St. Petersburg may be said to be a city the quality of the goods worn, and St. Petersburg may be said to be a city where the people wear ulsters, caps and high boots, the year round, no matter whether it be as hot as Tophet or as cold as Alaska. These Russian boots are worth looking at. They are about the only cheap thing in Russia, and you can get a pair made to order for $5. The same 'leather' and the same work in the United States would cost you $25, and the finish of the best leather is as fine as that of a portfolio or pocketbook. The boots reach to the knees and the best of them shipe like knees, and the best of them shine like patent leather. The pantaloons are always tucked inside of them and there is a fancy section about six inches wide above the ankle of every boot, in which the leather lies in wrinkles with the regularity of a washboard. It takes at least twice as much leather to make a pair of Russian boots as it does an American pair, and the same may be said of the Russian overcoat. The droschky drivers wear more cloth than any other cabman the world over. droschky drivers wear more cloth than any other cabman the world over. It takes more of good cloth—for the blue goods they wear seems to be of excellent material—to make a droschky driver's coat than to make a lady's trained ball dress, and this coat has to be padded and quilted. This coat has long skirts and it is made very large, so that the cabby can stuff his body out, and especially his back, to give himself the appearance of prosperous fatness. Nine-tenths of these drivers are padded in this way, and no well-to-do man would own a lean coachman.

Parts of the great map of the United States upon which the geological survey has now been at work for the last ten years are to be shown at Chicago next year. The piece, six feetin length and four feet in width, sow ready includes the State of Confecticut and a bit of Long Island and Eastern New York. This vast map will take at least twenty-five years more to complete. Its detail is such that upon it will be indicated every stream, brook, hillock, mountain, valley, farm, village and city. It will show every public and private road as completely as a surveyor's map of a small township. Talis map, when price in superficial area. European nations, as well as all others, are taking an extraordinary in-terest in the exposition. There is a commendable rivalry among those richest in art productions in the matter of making a creditable exhibit. They have come to recognize fully that the United States is by far the best market in the world for the products of the painter and the sculptor. Added to these reasons are the very efficient efforts agents of the fair to enlist the interes of foreign nations in the making of exhibits in all lines, and particularly in the art division. Supplementing the good work done in this direction by a good work done in this direction by a number of exposition special commis-sioners, Chief Ives of the Fine Arts De-partment, has made two trips to Euro-pean nations, with the result that from each one an art exhibit of exceptional merit is forthcoming.

It is next to certain that the date of dedication of the World's Fair buildings will be changed from October 12 to October 21, the latter being really the 400th anniversary of the landing of Columbus, allowance being made for the correction in the calendar made in the time af Pope Gregory. The Senate has passed a bill making the change retarred to and it is not doubted that the ferred to, and it is not doubted that the House of Representatives will take like action. The change was requested by the World's Fair Commissioners of New York, the Legislature of which State had provided for a Columbus celebra-tion on October 12. It was thought that the two celebrations, if held simultaneously, would detract from each other.

The tide of public opinion is unmistakably turning strongly in favor of keeping the World's Fair open of Sunday, provided a "silent" fair be assured. The exposition authorities have any, provided a sheet late to a sured. The exposition authorities have never had any idea of keeping the machinery running on Sunday and everything going at full boom as on week days, and since they have so declared themselves, the demands for Sunday lacking have distributed everything. closing have diminished greatly in number. Not a few who had petitioned for a closed fair, have changed their with and revoked their request and have asked that the gates be opened.

The annual meeting of the State Board of Horticulture was called to order at 2 o'clock Wednesday. There were present President Elwood Cooper, A. Block, Santa Barbara; J. H. Thomas, Visalia; A. F. White, Santa Rosa; Fred C. Miles, Penryn; Frank A. Kimball, National City, and J. L. Mosher, San José.

The treasurer reported a total exspenditure for the fiscal year of $9687.92, leaving a balance of $312.08 on hand of the $10,000 yearly appropriation. Of the special appropriation of $5000 to defray the expenses of an expert to foreign countries, $4068.65 was expended.

The secretary reported that 151,000 pamphlets and 81,700 bulletins were issued since the last annual meeting and 80,000 more are in course of preported. aration. He recommended the enact-ment of a new law which would cover ment of a new law which would cover the defects in the old law regarding the adulteration of olive cil and products sold under false labels. A law to pre-vent the wholesale adulteration of fer-tilizers which are placed upon the market, and which are of less value than ket, and which are of less value than sand, was also recommended.

President Ellwood Cooper was reelected, Fred C. Mills elected treasurer and J. L. Mosher auditor.
In his address President Cooper advocated a larger appropriation for the Horticultural Commission. He said that he is an advocate of the use of the means nature has supplied to protect herself. He believes in using insects to destroy the parasites which are the bane of the fruit-growers' existence. He recommends the republiistence. He recommends the republication of the annual reports of the board from 1885 to date in an abridged form for distribution at the World's Fair and throughout the State. -made in our advertisements-you have the privilege of returning any article not perfectly satisfactory and the money will be refunded—we recognize the fact that a true statement brings confidence and retains it; to make a misstatement or to do different from the plain facts as advertised, does great injury which cannot be overcome for months—advertising costs money; if a merchant pays out money for advertising, he should in no manner disappoint a customer or provoke criticism by dodging his statements; "barnum" says people love to be humbugged, but this is not so; it may answer for a circus, but not for dry goods—in the past few years in this city there has been advertising that had the very stamp of untruth all over it; everybody knew the statements were untruthful; it was done to draw trade, and it did draw for a few weeks, but when the collapse came it was as flat as a pancake; how long will it take an untruthful advertiser to regain the prestige of former days?—such advertising is an injury to all advertisers; it is an injury to the house that does it; it is an injury to the city—it is like shipping frozen oranges to the East to catch suckers; the shipper generally outs up for the freight while the would-be-sucker in the East points the finger of scorn at the shipper-a tin-horn gambler can beat the public; an untruthful advertiser can beat the public-which is the better of the two? most assuredly the gambler—they both ply the same profession -a great many business men in this city would shrink from making a statement that was not in perfect accord with all rules of decency and self-respect—but once in a while a fellow comes in to run the town; he starts in to show the merchant how to do business, and he generally does—they profit by his failure and go along from day to day in the even tenor of their way and succeed-one of the brighest merchants in the world once said that a certain party who was intent on watching everybody in all lines and cutting on goods outside of his legitimate business that he was trying to see how little he could make himself, and to see how he could keep others from mak-

—the history of some of the principal places in this city, we have largely drawn upon the imaginations of some of the ablest members of the historical society for our supplies—it is generally supposed that adams street was named after john adams, but john wasn't in it when this thorough bred street was propagated—way back in the early stages los angeles was a first-class paradise—adam and eve settled here—eve at that time made her living by feeding adam on green apples—he ate so many that he finally got to wearing one under his paper collar; hence the term of adam's apple—it has never been fully decided by our informant whether adam chewed gum or not, but it is a well established fact that he smoked eigarettes—eve did her hair up on tinfoil, used face powder and banged her hair—she probably banged adam's hair also when he looked crosseyed at the hired girl—since then it is as common for a man to wear an apple under his collar as it is for a Chinaman to wear a pigtail on the top of his coccanut, and it looks fully as well—this fully established the name of adams street—he was the only man around here that owned anything—finally a lot of people came out from boston and settled in that name of adams street—he was the only man around here that owned anything—finally a lot of people came out from boston and settled in that neighborhood, and the first thing they did was to chop out all the fig trees and set the land out to baked beans and pumpkin pies—this took away some of the exclusiveness of the street, and both adam and eve went into hysterics and died—the boom came along and struck them in the forward deck and the prices went up like baking powder with alum, and ammonia in it—some asked as much for an acre of corn fodder as a kentuckian would for a distillery full of the juice—when the fodder was all gone thev naturally went back to a diet of crackers and cheese, but it is the same old adams street; it has the same aroma; the water has the same old flavor; they use the same kind of a stick in their lemonade, wink just the same, and in every way do exactly as they did when adam was a baby—good people never sneeze on adams street—it is not to be wink just the same, and in every way do exactly as they did when adam was a baby—good people never sneeze on adams street—it is not to be sneezed at—it is a good, broad street, wide sidewalks and noble trees; it also has a job lot of recond hand sprinkling hydrants with an old broken down rubber hose attachment that looks as if it had done service as a teething ring for a baby elephant—it is the only thing left on the street that reminds one that our old friend adam once lived in the vi-sin-i-ty—Our big cloak sale occurs monday at 9 o'clock—nearly two thousand cloaks and cape newmarkets will be on sale—a good, nice, neat, com-

Jacoby Convicted on His Second Trial.

Guilty of Manslaughter, With a Recommendation for Mercy.

Only Six Hours for the Jury to Arrive at a Verdict.

A Former Superintendent of Schools Adjudged Insane-Admitted to Citizenship-Sult to Foreclose a Mortgage-Court Notes.

The second trial of P. K. Jacoby, charged with the murder of Mrs. Mar garet McGoldrick, at Redondo, in June last, was concluded in Department One yesterday, the jury, after a delibera-tion of six hours' duration, returning a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, with a recommendation of mercy attached thereto

Very little further testimony was offered by the defense during the morning session, and counsel did not consome very much time in arguing the case, but it was 4 o'clock in the after-noon before the matter was finally sub-mitted to the jury. As nothing was heard from that body for some time, it was feared that there had been another mistrial, but at 10 o'clock the jurors filed into court with a verdict as above

The defendant's counsel will, in all probability, move the Court for a new trial next week when Jacoby appears to

BASEBALL.

Preparing for the Opening of the Second Season.

It Will Be Inaugurated in This City With a Big Parade and General Blowout-Bunting Abolished in the California League.

President Vanderbeck writes that the second season will open at Los Angeles with a big parade and a general blowout. Col. Robinson will be here with in aggregation that is just now putting up the strongest game in the League. and as the Colonel is the greatest winner in the business he will doubtless make a spread that will eclipse anything here-tofore attempted in the line of baseball fireworks. The first game of the second championship season will be played next Wednesday.

Wednesday.

At a meeting of the magnates held last Monday it was decided to abolish bunting during the balance of the year, and President Mone was ordered to so instruct the umpires. This will make more hitting and base-running, as Mr. Vanderbeck says, and was done to satisfy a wast majority of the patrons of the game, who are prejudiced against the sacrifice hit. Hereafter, when a man is on first-base and the batter fouls man is on first-base and the batter fouls off balls in attempting to bunt, strikes will be called on him. The game will abound in double plays and more life generally, and the Angels will incidentally be the gainers, as past records show that they are poor sacrificers. San José will suffer most from this revolutionary rule, but Finn is anxious to please the public.

Mr. Vanderbeck writes: "What ball

Mr. Vanderbeck writes: "What ball our pitchers have been putting up this trip! In the 9 to 0 game. The afternoon paper which steals its "specials" from cigar store bulletin boards, and on the strength of which it gets out an alleged "baseball extra edition," had noexplanation to make of the ex-pose which was so cleverly worked by the long-suffering cigar dealer. There were no mitigating circumstances about the case, and the sheet discreetly kept quiet on the subject, but very indiscreetly devoted considerable of its more or less valuable editorial space to an underhanded attack on cigar stores in general, and a local paragraph directed against the particular cigar store at the corner of Spring and Second streets. To rob a man is bad enough, but to attack his character and attempt to ruin his business because he tries to protect himself is a species of petty meanness that passes all auderstanding.

By taking yesterday's game the Angels have won the pennant and can only be done out of it by a "fluke," which is not at all probable. That is, the official records show that Los Angeles in entitled to the flag by reason of superior playing, and can be deprived of it only through a questionable desuperior praying, and can be deprived of it only through a questionable decision which the magnates might, make forfeiting a game that was won on its merits after a hard, honest fight. In answer to a query the following dispatch was received last evening from President Vanderbeck: "We must win to-morrow's game to make it sure."

LUCK BETTER THAN RICHES.

Speaking of good luck, what do you consider the most profitable moment in you life? Preachers, gamesters, actresses financiers, politicians, board of trade spec ulators, lawyers and newspaper men have answered the question. Each in his own way tells how he met that "tide in the af-fairs of men" which bore him on the crest of the wave to success.

Harry Romaine, the well known sporting man, who has lost and won thousands on the sight of a single card, does not look on the sight of a single card, does not look upon any of the flattering turns of chance as highly profitable, though he has written a book defending the profession of the gamester. "The most profitable thing I ever did in my life was to get married," said Mr. Romaine, "and the most profitable moment in my life was certainly that in which I took the marriage vows."

Miss Frances E. Willard, known all over the world as the leader and president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, stopped long enough in the midst of the proceedings of the federated clubs, at Central Music hall, to read the question and send out her answer. It reads, "The

It might be expected that he would point back to some such lucky turn of the mar-ket when asked what had been the most profitable moment in his life. But when he heard the question he clambered up out of the noisy pit of the open board, pulled nervously at his mustache and said. "Profit means happiness, and the happiest, proud-est moments in my life, as I look back, were those when, as a boy, I used to come in from the spring run on the old farm with

Wished He Was a Colored Boy. Wished He Was a Colored Boy.

Some few months ago the firm engaged a new office boy. He was a bright little chap, just turned fourteen and fresh from England. 'Arry, the clefks call him because that is the way he first pronounced his own name when asked what it was. When he grows a bit bigger and acquires a better knowledge of United States English he will punch somebody's head for calling him 'Arry, and then he will be called Harry.

called Harry. 'Arry at once struck up a close friend-ship with the little colored errand boy in the office. The pair often take bites out of the same apple and otherwise manifest congeniality of tastes and temperaments.
The other morning 'Arry showed up at the office with a dirty face.
"Go and wash yourself," said one of the elerks to him reprovingly. "Do you want to be taken for a nigger boy?"

'Arry shot an envious glance at his colored chum, and then replied with the utmost seriousness:

A Green City Fellow.

A local farmer tells this story: "When in the city we do not act half so idiotic as city folks do on a farin. Why do you know that one summer a student from the Cincinnati university visited my farin, and one day when I started to get some young potatoes, took the basket from my hand and said he'd get them. Half an hour later he came back with an empty basket, saying that he had hunted all over the patch and could find nothing but blossonis, and could find nothing but blossoms.

There was not a single potato on the vines.

I thought he would drop dead when I took the hoe and began digging them out of the ground. He said he thought they grew on top of the vines."—Cincinnati

A Wealthy French Aristocrat Who Visits the Poor.

A Meeting With Louise Michel-The Box langer Episode and What It Cost Her-Sculptor, Novelist and [Contributed to THE TIMES.] In France It is at present the fashion to sneer at and to underrate the nobil-ity, but there are some members of it whose blameless, benevolent lives and high intellectual attainments must insure the approval, nay, the admiration of the most cynical critic. In the fore-mest rank of these stands Anne Duchesse d'Uzes. Daughter of the Duc Mortemart and of his wife, d'Chevigne, the Duchess belongs to the nighest French aristocracy. Her husband was very wealthy, and she herself had an enormous fertune inherited from her maternal grandmother, Mme. Clinot, who has given her name to one of be best brands of champagne.

The Duke of Uzes is the Premier Duke of France, and the title is now borne by a young man of 23 who is traveling in Africa; he is the eldest son of the Duchess, who became a widow in early youth. She was deeply attached to her husband, a distinguished man, fond of literature and a thorough sportsman; and she showed her loss not only by never marrying again and remaining faithful to his memory, but also by adopting to his memory, but also by adopting most of his pursuits. She has always superintended most carefully the education of her children, of whom there are four: The young Duke already alluded to; Louis de Crussol, who enlisted and is now quartermaster in the French army; Simone, her eldest daughter, married a couple of years ago to the young Duke de Luynes (the intimate triend of the Duke of Orleans) and her fourth child, Mathilde, who has only itable of women; her heart goes out to those who suffer, to the poor, to the sick. Much of her large fortune is those who suffer, to the poor, to the sick. Much of her large fortune is given away and she does not content herself with distributing her alms by deputy, but goes among the poor in their cottages and in their dirty, foulmelling alleys of the great city.

That well-known republican, Lonise Michel, is a kind-hearted woman. She often runs up the stairs of some writched bed-ridden fellow-creature to see if she can be of use. On several occasions, when tending a sick woman, she met a dark-eved lady, very simply she met a dark-eyed lady, very simply dressed in black, who made the patient comfortable, suppplied her wants and went away after conversing pleasantly. Louise Michel said to herself, "That is a woman after my own heart. I wonder who she is?"

It happened that on one occasion
Louise was the first to leave the attic. When she came to the door she saw a well-appointed brougham standing op-posite, and the dark-eyed lady who had escended the stairs behind her stepped into it and was driven off.

Louise Michel, rather astounded, asked the concierge if he knew who the lady was.

Duchess d'Uzes!"

This set Louise Michel thinking that after all there was some good in that aristocracy she was so anxious to de-white apron and sleeves of the trained nutse, and in company with other noble minded Parisian ladies (all widows) goes to the hospital of the calvary, where with her own hands she bathes and binds the wounds of the poor incurable cancerous patients. She remains there there or four hours as a time and stands three or four hours at a time, and stands the awful sights without flinching. The patients simply adore her. Her courage, as yet, is not up to witnessing a surgical operation, but she has taken the engagement of serving in the ambulances, should war break out; for this tender-hearted woman is a great patender-hearted woman is a great patender-hearted. tender-hearted woman is a great pat-

Her name was mixed up at one time with the romantic career of Gen Boulanger, an ever loyal monarchist. She had seen in him a possible Gen Monk, who, after having cleared away anons, who, after naving cleared away all obstacles, would offer to Philip of Orleans the crown of France. She gave her time, her influence and part of her wealth to the cause in which she believed, hoping to bring happiness and prosperity to the French people she loves so well. Her friends know how graphy disappointed she was when she fores so we!!. Her friends know how cruelly disappointed she was when she discovered that personal ambition alone guided Boulanger. She had been led by patriotism, and her dream coat her a goodly fortune—$600,000.

her a goodly fortune—$600,000.

For any other woman, the occupations we have described would suffice to fill up her time, but the Duchess's active spirit craved for more. Not content with being an excellent musician (she plays the organ admirably,) she has become a clever sculptor, and at the Salon des Champs Elysees we have seen a beautiful devotional figure.

The Duchess is a small and graceful woman, with delicate aristrocratic features, a very white skin, lively dark eyes and dark hair dressed very close to the head. Her hands are beautifully modeled, white and small. Certainly a life well-filled as hers is with good works, and the cultivation of the arts is conducive to serenity, for the expression of her mobile contenance is merry, her voice is vivacious, her smile frequent and charming.

Some years ago theaDuchess resolved to write and publish a novel: she was anxious to find out whether she really had talent, so knowing that anything appearing under her own name would immediately call down a shower of compliments, she published anonymously her first novel "Pauvre Petie" and was rewarded for her modesty by the sale of four editions in as many weeks. A second novel, "Julien Masly," soon followed.

Of late the Duchess has been tempted to write for the stage. A play full of dramatic strength, Le Cour et le Sang (Heart and Blood,) was performed with Questioned the other day by a friend as to how she managed to do so much more than other people, the Duchess replied, smiling: "Part of my secret is that I have entirely given up going to dinners and large evening parties. At a meeting of the Anthropological intitute Miss Isabella Bird (Mrs. Bishop), stitute Miss Isabella Bird (Mrs. Bishop), the well known 'traveler, read an interesting paper on the Ainos of Japan, that singular race of "hairy men" who are chiefly found in the island of Yesso. Miss Bird spent some time in a village of Ainos near Volcano Eay, studying their manners and customs; and she illustrated her lecture with specimens of their dresses, utensils and weapons, as well as with lantern illusand weapons, as well as with lantern illustrations, some drawn by herself and others taken from Japanese artists, who, however, have caricatured the types of the people to a certain extent.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKETS

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—[Special to THE TIMES.] The local fruit market, was fairly active at slight reductions in quotations, Apricots and peaches are in abundant sup-Apricots and peaches are in abundant supply and values are lower. Pears are arriving freely and are much improved in quality. Figs are very scarce and quotations are purely mominal. The first carload of Lodi watermelons is offered for sale. Choice red nectarines are scarce and command top prices. White varieties are neglected.

The market for dairy produce remains in about the same condition.

The vegetable market developed a fair amount of activity. Arrivals of all kinds are liberal and as the demand is almost entirely local values are weak and subject to purchasers' pleasure. Potatoes and onlons are in large supply and weak. Tomatoes are firm and Vacaville in large boxes brought top prices. Cucumbers, summer squash and green corn are in ample supply for all requirements.

Farmer Jews in New Jersey.

The problem whether Russian Jews can become American farmers is in course of solution at Woodbine, N. J., where $140,000 of the Baron Hirsch fund for the relief of Hebrews compelled to emigrate from Russia are now invested in 5000 acres of land and improvements, and where a colony of 87 expatriated families, embracing nearly 800 souls, are already settled on farms. Each family obtains a five years' lease of 80 acres, 10 of which years lease to so acress, 10 of which are ready for crops, leaving 20 in wood, which can be cut for fire or sale. On each farm are a house and outbuildings, and each tenant is provided with a cow, poultry, seeds, tools, plants and fruit trees, as well as blackbery, raspberry, strawberry and grape vines. To be even trees, as well as blackbery, raspberry, strawberry and grape vines. To be exact, each man gets 150 peach, 55 apple, 27 pear, 12 cherry, 4 plum and 2 quince trees; then there are for each 1250 blackberry vines, 600 raspberries, 550 grapes and 1 acre in strawberries. Four acres are planted in rye, and each tenant gets a con 25 blackberny and each tenant gets a cow, 25 chick-ens, $50 worth of fertilizer and $25 worth of seed. The original cost of each farm and its improvements is put at $1200, the house and outbuildings costing $550 apiece. The tenant can get a deed of his property if he sucget a deed or his property if he succeds in paying $400 within five years, the other $800 remaining on mortgage. Unless he pays the $400 within five years the property reverts to the fund. The colony is an example of a farm village, as no house is more than a mile from the railroad station and postoffice.

The Los Nietos and Ranchito Walnut-Growers' Association, whose members are all growers of this section, has been for several years the principal shipper of this great staple crop. The crop of 1890, handled by the association, repre-1890, handled by the association, representing the product of 47 growers, amounted to 761,019 pounds (6536 sacks), for which was received $59,611.84. The crop of 1891—51 growers—was 702,469 pounds (6619 sacks), and brought $58,020.83. In addition and brought $58.020.88. In addition to the above, growers, not members of the association raised and shipped walnuts in amount and value equal to about 25 per cent of the association's shipments. This year upward of 90 growers have joined the association, and with the big harvest now in prospect and the increased acreage of young groves coming into bearing, the prospects are that the yield and receipts for the crop of 1892 will be largely in excess of previous years.

The experiment of the killing of cattle by electricity will soon be tried at the Aberdeen abattoir, where the elec-tric plant is now being installed. If the experiment proves that this man-ner of killing cattle has no bad influ-ence on the quality of the beef the ap-plication of electricity will hereafter be general.- Exchange.

How delicious is that dusky bird who goes caw-cawing over the blooming plains, making a black streak through the summer sunshine to the inner consciousness of an eagle bird, few of you humans can understand.

How dainty, juicy and tender he is to the epiglottis!

How gently he reposes upon the eagle bird's digestive outfit!

How utterly fine and satisfactory How utterly fine and satisfactory good old ancient crow is to the taste of the monarch of the air it would take reams of paper to tell you, but since that sultry day early in June, up on the Mississippia River, I have had rather an overdose and have been taking a good long rest.

You may have glanced up this way and seen my pinions glistening in the sun, but there has been for several weeks past a state of eaglistic inwardness that has had to be nursed in order to pull the old bird through. Hence the season of deep and holy calm that has had possession of the clear-eyed fowl of freedom; hence the silent, deep brown, russet-tinged study I have been into. But it all O. K.

I find crow to be delicious, healthful and so invitorating that we are all for and so invigorating that we are all go-ing to get in and mop up the earth, as usual, with the rotund circumlocutor who fishes out of the windows of Gray Gables at Buzzard's Bay.

For Grover and free trade won't go down yet awhile. The great Republic is not yet ready to turn its commerce over to Europe, Irope and Orope, that anybody knows of. The glory of my great royal country is in the pride and prosperity of its own people. In the music of its trip-hammers the eagle bird delights as though seraphims were thrumming upon harps. In the spark showers from its anvils I see the light-ning flasnes of a glorious destiny, and no sporadic trouble between groups of individuals shall serve to turn the march of progress of a great, grand, matchless people. E Don't make any mistake about this, but hearken to the Eagle's pointer, that points for all.

Grover Cleveland and the Democracy is no stronger before the country than they were four years ago. Benjamin Harrison and the Republican party is a great deal stronger than then.

But as a matter of fact this is a year in which the individual at the head of either ticket cuts but mighty little

The great principle of America—the United States of America, first last, all the time, and a week or two after that, is what will reflect President Harrison in spite of internal disappointments and the outward show of hands. the outward show of hands.

the outward show of hands.

The spectacular side show has its shouter at the tent door yelling about the double-ended boa constrictor and the fat lady who weighs more than a carload, but the big crowd goes into the circus just the same as it always has and always will.

The large, level-headed community is still in charge of its own cabesa and when voting time gets here will be found doing the ballot act in proper fashion.

Free trade and wild cat money, protection, falsehoods and anarchistic aliens are appreciated at their true worth by the great quiet population.

That sits by the evening lamp, reads the aliens are approved worth by the great quiet population that sits by the evening lamp, reads the papers and does its own thinking. When the other crowd gets in the majority—when the turbulent mob gets bigger than that powerful majority with horse then God help the Republic!

Another Guiteau has been unearthed by the trouble at Homestead, but it doesn't mean anything except that a crazy man has broken loose. The republic was not jarred from its poise by the assassination of a Garfield, nor will it he better that it be by the shots that struck down the great coke baron of Pennsylvania. This is too big and splendid a land of freedom and happiness to be disturbed by a fester in one corner of it. Out of the degradation and ignorance of European countries we have brought some manners, methods and men that disquiet and disgust, but they are only a few of this people who are not true and kind-hearted and loval. A corral full of blooded horses with never behaved from all night; with the countries of the c be heard from all night long, but one little measley burro turned into it will little measley burro turned into it will set up a bray that wakens every baby within a half-mile of the vicinity. The noisy, turbulent dynamiters are the white blackbirds of humanity, and they cut no figure in the great procession of calm and dignified humans who go right along, day after day, making history and attending to their own business. What a happy thought it is to know this to be a fact.

But life is, thank fortune! not all strikes and homicides and bad luck gen-

For instance, there is the drollery of things that a Chinaman says, one of which the Eagle heard a man tell another man the other day.

A certain celestial had been in a family so long as to have reached that period when he seemed. to think that matters in the household were carried on for his particular benefit. He had become as offensive that frequent reports had to be made to 'the 'boss' by the woman member of the family. Matters finally became so bad as to cause the 'boss' to direct when the same so bad as to cause the 'boss' to direct. "boss" by the woman hemore so bad family. Matters finally became so bad as to cause the "boss" to direct that the Chinese party be told that if he could not get along without so much trouble they would have to get another raft in the offing that is not so very off, and getting tan and freckles aboard their jolly faces that will last them until away along in the fall? That's the way I put it 'up with my thinker, and I'm glad they are. The Eagle would love to go down "where the emerald sea waves sigh" and soak his pinions in the Briny deep with them—he would, but old exigency has chained him to the sunny outlook where information is dispensed with, so you girls will have to pensed with, so you girls will have to

The girls they're wearing galluses
And collars, cuffs and hats.
Precisely like the men folks do—
And four-in-hand cravats;
Their jackets look live overcoats.
Their watches sport a fob,
But why not put on trousers, too,
And finish up the job.

It is night in Squaw Gulch. Not a breeze whimpers in the chapparal nor a pappoose, either. The pale moon sits up on its sharp end in the western sky that is blue about something and leaks light upon the landscape. The big canon back yonder yawns like a lazy peon. The scents of yerba santa and white sage go across the dry district hand in hand, if you will not jostle me because the metaphor don't suit you, and the ozone so prevalent in the home of the horned toad and forty-six legged centipede seems to be doing a large business. Out of the unfretted silence all of a sudden leaps a sound of saws being fled and men being tortured on the the rack of the inquisition. It splits the quiet into fragments and bursts the bonds of calm. With one long, lingering wail of despair the dread sound filters into the distance, and the little filters into the distance, and the little burro with cockleburrs in his tail folds his ears about him and goes off to pleasant dreams.

THE EAST SIDE

Trying to Pass an Old Confederate Bill-

Officer Dave Craig yesterday arrested man who was attempting to pass an old $5 Confederate bill. The first at-tempt was at Richter's candy store, where the fellow purchased two bits' worth of confectionery, and offering the bill in payment demanded $4.75 change. Mrs. Richter promptly refused the paper and held the candy, whereupon the man left but immediately made a second attempt to pass the bogus currency at a fruit stand in the next currency at a fruit stand in the next block. He would have succeeded this time had not the proprietor found it necessary to take the bill out to get change. Upon learning the worthless-ness of the scrip the fruit dealer re-turned it to the would-be customer and turned it to the would-be customer and notified Officer Craig, who arrested him on the avenue soon after. At the station he would not give his name, but said he worked for B. Solomon, the second-hand dealer of Upper Main street, who was recently released from San Quentin, after serving a term of years for receiving stolen goods. Officer Romans, who was in charge of the station, telephoned to the main the station, telephoned to the main office for instructions, but was told to release the man, as an attempt to pass money of that description was not a recognized crime. The man was ac-cordingly set at liberty, the officer, however, retaining the bill, which he considered but a wise precaution under

H. Carson, the departed ex-foreman of the cable road, has been heard from at Santa Fê, N.M., he not yet having arrived at his mountain retreat, "near San Jacinto." The word comes in the form of a postal card addressed to the new foreman, Mr. Tilden, who states that Carson is probably in Chicago, as that is the point for which he was headed at the time the card was written, on the 17th. It now card was written, on the 17th. It now turns out that in addition to small loans, aggregating something more than $100, Carson owed bills amounting to $300 or $400 more, one to a prominent physician, said to be for $175.

HUMANE SOCIETY.

A Large Amount of Work Being Per-formed-Report for June.

The work of the Humane Society of this city goes on, the number of cases investigated by the agent. M. V. being large. During the month of May forty-five cases were brought to the attention of the society, thirty of these having to do with the aid and reform of children. Out of this number seventeen were discovered to be incorrigible, twenty were in the habit of visiting saloons. Of the thirty twenty-four have parents either drunken or dis-reputable.

The prevention of cruelty to animals included eight cases, comprising over-loading, beating, killing cruelly and starving.

For the month of June the number of cases investigated is as follows: Cases reported, 48; boys. 7; girls. 27; visiting saloons, 10; animals needing protection, 11.

From these figures of the report it will easily be seen how large a share of youthful deprayity is due to the intemperance of parents and to the laxity of the enforcement of the laws against the selling of liquor to minors.

Central W.C.T.U.

For a number of years I was troubled with my stomach and bowels, and after growing constantly worse for a long time inflammation set in, which terminated in tumor of the bowels. None of the many physicians consulted were able to afford me relief, until after suffering the terrors of many deaths, in my desperation I went to DR. WONG. At this time my stomach had grown to three times its natural proportions, and mine was considered a hopeless case. After talking briefly with the Doctor I had faith that he could help me. He felt my pulse and thus located the disease. The first oose I took produced a greater effect than all the medicines taken before put together. After four short weeks of treatment Dr. Wong has entirely cured me, and today I am a well man.

Hundreds of other testimonials are on file in the Doctor's office which he has received from his numerous American patients, whom he has cured from all manner of diseases.
